PREFACE.

It is hoped that the present edition will fulfill the dual object of the editors, namely: first, to assist the pupil to study with intelligence and appreciation the text prescribed for examination, and secondly, to arouse an interest in, and a taste for, classical literature. While it is the duty of an examiner to ascertain whether the student understands the text prescribed, it ought to be the duty of the intelligent teacher to see that the student appreciates the work he is reading.

The editors have sought to aid the teacher in his work by furnishing the materials in an attractive form.

JOHN HENDERSON.

LIFE OF VERGIL.

Publius Vergilius Maro<sup>1</sup> was born on the fifteenth of Birth. October, B.C. 70, in the first consulate of M. Licinius Crassus and Cn. Pompeius, at Andes (now Pietola), a small village near Mantua. Since the full franchise was not given to this part of Gaul (Gallia Transpadana) till some years afterwards<sup>2</sup>, the poet, like many of his predecessors and contemporaries in literature, was not a Roman, but an Italian provincial.

The parents of Vergil, like those of Horace, were of His Parents obscure birth. Some authorities say that the poet's father was a potter, others, that he was a brickmaker, while others again assert that he was the servant of a travelling merchant, Magius, whose daughter, Magia Polla, he afterwards married. Whatever may have been his occupation, certain it is, that he was at the time of the poet's birth, the steward, factor, or possessor of an estate near Mantua. The childhood of Vergil was passed amid the hills and woods that fringed the verdant banks of the Mincius, and the early association of the poet with the lovely scenery of the neighbourhood of his native town may account for the exquisite touches of pastoral life which appear in the Eclogues and the Georgics.

<sup>1</sup> The English equivalent of Vergilius is often spelt Virgil. Indeed the poet is best known by the name thus spelt. However, it is better to adopt the spelling that harmonizes with what is undoubtedly the correct Latin form. The form Virgilius was not common till the middle ages. Every Roman citizen had regularly three names—denoting the individual, the gens or clan, and the familia. Thus in Publius Vergilius Maro, Publius is the praenomen, marking the individual; Vergilius is the nomen, denoting the gens or clan; while Maro is the cognomen, or family name. Sometimes an agnomen was added for military distinction, as Africanus to Scipio, Numidicus to Metellus.

Studies and Early Life.

begin:
B.C. 55.*

Vergil began his studies at Cremona, where, we are told, he assumed the toga virilis on the same day on which Lucretius died. The town itself had already been noted, having been the birthplace of Furius Bibaculus, and of the critic, Quintilius Varro.

*Vergil goes to Rome,
B.C. 53.*

After a brief stay at Cremona, and subsequently at Mediolanum (Milan), the poet went to Rome. In the capital, Vergil, after the fashion of the day, attended the lectures of rhetoricians and philosophers. Under Epidius, the rhetorician, the teacher of Marc Antony and afterwards of Octavius, and under the Epicurean philosopher, Siron, the poet became acquainted with the outlines of rhetoric and philosophy. It is quite probable that his father intended him for the bar, but a weak voice and a diffident manner were insuperable barriers in the way of obtaining distinction in public speaking. Vergil soon gave up rhetoric, and, in fact, renounced poetry for the more congenial study of philosophy. Under Siron, he seems to have made considerable progress in Epicurean philosophy, and the love he retained for this branch of learning is plainly observable in many of his extant writings.<sup>4</sup> In a minor poem, generally supposed to be genuine, he welcomes the exchange of poetry and rhetoric for more useful studies :

“Away with you, empty coloured flagons of the rhetoricians, words swollen, but not with the dews of Greece ; and, away with you, Stilo, Tagitius, and Varro, you, nation of pedants, soaking with fat ; you, empty cymbals of the classroom. Farewell, too, Sabinus, friend of all my friends : now, farewell, all my beautiful companions, we are setting our sails for a haven of bliss, going to hear the learned words of the great Siron, and we mean to redeem our life from all distraction. Farewell, too, sweet Muses ; for, to tell the truth, I have found how sweet you were : and yet, I pray you, look on my pages again, but with modesty and at rare intervals.”<sup>5</sup>

After a short stay at Rome Vergil probably went to Naples, where, we are told, Parthenius, another Epicurean, was his instructor. The great Epic<sup>6</sup> of Lucretius, added to the teachings of his instructors, gave, no doubt, his mind a strong bent towards the doctrines of Epicurus. It is probable that the poet returned to his father's farm before the outbreak of the war between Pompey and Caesar, B.C. 49. It is also likely that he remained there till after the battle of Philippi (B.C. 42), and that he employed his time in gaining by observation materials which he afterwards employed in his great didactic poem, the Georgics. Returns home.

Acquaintance with Augustus and Maecenas.

Unlike Horace, Vergil sympathized with the party of Caesar. The formation of the Second Triumvirate threw the Roman world into the broils of a civil war. In the division of the provinces, the Gauls (except Gallia Narbonensis) fell to Antony. The lands of eighteen cities were given up to reward the legions of the unscrupulous Antony, and among the lands were those of Cremona. The district around this city failing to satisfy the greedy rapacity of the legionaries of the Triumvir, the farms of the neighbouring Mantua were seized, and among the lands confiscated were those of the poet's father. C. Asinius Pollio, the prefect of Gallia Transpadana, unable to restrain the lawlessness of the soldiers of Antony, sent Vergil to Rome with a recommendation to Augustus to allow the poet to retain his paternal estate. It is quite probable that congenial tastes and a recognition of the genius of Vergil may have influenced Pollio to take this course. At the close of the same year (41 B.C.), however, war broke out anew between Octavius and L. Antonius. Pollio was deposed from office, and Alfenus Varus appointed in his stead. Another division of lands followed, and the poet is said to have been deprived of his estate the second time.<sup>7</sup> His friends, Gallus, Pollio, and Varus, however, interposed and saved his farm. Loss of his farm.
 By them he was introduced to Maecenas, the patron of literary men,—afterwards the prime minister of Augustus. This year marks the beginning of the rising fortunes of the poet. With his friend and patron, Pollio, as Consul, Vergil became the honoured member of a literary coterie which graced the table of Maecenas. The intimacy that Vergil enjoyed at court, is shewn by his being one of those who A second time loses his farm.

went to Brundisium along with Maecenas, when the latter was negotiating a treaty between Augustus and Antony.<sup>8</sup>

Through the munificent kindness of his patrons he was raised to luxury and affluence. He had a magnificent house in Rome on the Esquiline, near the residences of Horace and Maecenas, estates in Sicily, and in Campania, near Naples. The mild climate and clear skies of Southern Italy suited his delicate constitution, and till his death, his Campanian residence was his favourite abode.<sup>9</sup> From the date of his early Eclogues till his death, little need be said of his life except that he devoted himself to study and to the completion of his immortal works.

Death and Character.

In the year B.C. 19, he went to Greece, possibly with a view to restore his health, and to give a finish to his great work, the Aeneid. At Athens he met Augustus, who had just returned from Samos. Vergil returned to Italy in company with the emperor, but died at Brundisium three days after he landed, 22nd September, 19 B.C. He was buried near Naples on the road leading to Puteoli (Puzzuoli). His epitaph, said to have been dictated by himself in his last moments, was as follows :—

Epitaph.

Mantua me genuit ; Calabri rapuere ; tenet nunc Parthenope. Cecini pascua, rura, duces.<sup>10</sup>

It is said that shortly before his death Vergil wished to destroy the Aeneid rather than leave it in its unfinished state. His friends however dissuaded him, and the poem was afterwards edited and published by Varius and Tucca under the sanction of Augustus and Maecenas.

Vergil is generally described as of tall stature, delicate frame, homely features, and dark complexion, abstinent in the use of food, shy, and fond of retirement. Horace is said to have had Vergil in his mind's eye when he wrote<sup>11</sup> the lines thus rendered by Conington :

<sup>8</sup> Horace Satires i, 5 and 10.

<sup>9</sup> Geo. iv, 563. Illo Vergilium me tempore dulcis aiebat Parthenope, studiis florentem ignobilis oti.

Aeneid.

<sup>11</sup> Hor. Sat. i, 3, 29-34.

“The man is passionate, perhaps misplaced
 In social circles of fastidious taste ;
 His ill-trimmed beard, his dress of uncouth style,
 His shoes ill-fitting, may provoke a smile ;
 But he's the soul of virtue ; but he's kind
 But that coarse body hides a mighty mind.”

He was so pure and chaste that the Neapolitans gave him the name of Parthenias, or the maiden.<sup>12</sup> He is said to have been shy and even awkward in society, and these traits even the polished society of the Capital never succeeded in eradicating. He was distrustful of his own powers, which his high ideas of literary excellence led him to underrate.

In the midst of an irreligious age, he had the strongest religious sentiment ; in the midst of vice he remained virtuous ; and while licentiousness disfigures the writings of many of his brother poets, the pages of Vergil everywhere inculcate the highest truths of morality and virtue.

Works.

Vergil is said to have attempted in his youth an epic poem<sup>13</sup> Early works on the wars of Rome, but the difficulty of the task soon led him to abandon his design. His earlier poems, Culex, Moretum, Ciris, Copa, and those that pass under the name Catalepta, though they give little proof of great ability, still show the careful attention the poet bestowed on metre and diction.

1. The writings that first established the reputation of Vergil were the Eclogues,<sup>14</sup> pastoral poems, ten in number, written between 43 B.C.-37 B.C. This class of poetry was Eclogues as yet unknown in Italy, though it had already reached its perfection in the hands of the Sicilian Theocritus, whose influence may be traced in many writers from the days of Vergil to those of Tennyson. The Idyll<sup>15</sup> of Theocritus exhibits a true picture of the shepherd's life, the joys and sorrows, character, sentiment and habits of the rural swains,

<sup>14</sup> These were called by the generic term Bucolica (βουκολικά, scil. ποιήματα, from βουκολέω, to attend cattle). The term Eclogue is from the Greek ἐκλογή, a choice collection, and may mean that the poems under that name were a collection from a large number. Spenser wrote the word Eglogue and followed the derivation of Petrarch, αἰγῶν λόγοι, “tales of goats” or “tales of goatherds.”

the piny woods, the upland lawns and feeding flocks, the sea and sky of Sicily. Vergil's Eclogues, on the other hand, can hardly be said to be true pictures of pastoral life. His shepherds and shepherdesses belong to the island of Sicily rather than to the district of Mantua. His characters are too conventional, his representation of life too artificial. Still the earlier poems of Vergil have beauties. Their melodious diction, their soft and easy flowing style,<sup>16</sup> were admired by Horace, no mean judge of the poet's art.

2. The Georgics,<sup>17</sup> in four books, was written (between B.C. 37–B.C. 30<sup>18</sup>) at the request of Maecenas,<sup>19</sup> to whom the poem was dedicated. In this didactic Epic, Vergil copies largely from Hesiod, Nicander, and Aratus.<sup>20</sup> While the Eclogues have justly been regarded as inferior to the Idylls of his Greek original, Theocritus, the Georgics, on the other hand, have been accounted superior to any other poem on the same subject that has ever appeared. The harmonious and graceful language, the pleasing descriptions of rural scenes, the apt and charming episodes, all combine to lend an interest to a subject, which in any other hands would have been intolerably dull. The time was ripe for such a poem. Agriculture had been the chief employment and the honored occupation of the Romans from the early days of the City. The long-continued wars had, however, desolated Italy.<sup>21</sup> Even after war had ceased, the soldier, too long accustomed to camps and the excitement of a military life, cared little about the prosaic life of a farmer. <sup>18</sup> The chief historical events alluded to in the Georgics are: the death of Julius Caesar, 44 B.C. (B. i, 456); the civil wars ended by the battle of Philippi, 42 B.C. (B. i, 490); the wars waged (34 B.C.) in Parthia under Antony, and those on the Rhine under Agrippa (B. i, 509); the battle of Actium and the submission of the East, B.C. 20 (B. ii, 172; iii, 27–32; iv, 562); the irruptions of the Daci on the Danube, A.C. 30 (B. ii, 497).

peaceful habits of rural industry, the poem, which Addison pronounces "the most complete, elaborate and finished piece of all antiquity," was written. The first book treats of tilling the fields, the second of orchards, the third of the care of horses and cattle, and the fourth of bees. The two most successful imitations in English of this poem are Philips's Pastorals, and Thompson's Seasons. Contents of Georgics.

3. The Aeneid,<sup>22</sup> in twelve books, written between 29 B.C.—Aeneid. 19 B.C., recounts the story of the escape of Aeneas from burning Troy, his wanderings over the deep in search of a home which the fates had promised, his final settlement in Italy as the founder of the Roman Empire destined in after ages to rule the world. No doubt, Vergil borrowed largely from the Greek and Roman writers who preceded him. The Romans were original in no department of literature, except perhaps in the departments of History and Jurisprudence. Vergil can hardly be called a borrower any more than the rest of his countrymen in other spheres of letters. The object of Vergil was to produce a national epic, by showing the various steps of the growth of the Empire, and in doing this, he had to give prominence to the influence of Greek literature as an important element in moulding Roman thought. Vergil charged with plagiarism.

Style of the Aeneid.

Defects.—Vergil has been severely censured<sup>23</sup> for (1) deficiency in the power of invention, (2) intermixture of Greek and Latin traditions, (3) anachronisms, (4) his mode of representing the character of Aeneas, (5) the sameness of the individual characters. These are the main charges brought by his detractors, and granting the full indictment brought against the poem, Vergil still has the proud claim of being one of the greatest of epic poets. No doubt his power of invention is less than Homer's, no doubt he did intermingle the traditions of Greece and those of Rome (for Vergil criticised.

<sup>22</sup> The first notice of the Aeneid that we have is in a letter of Vergil to Augustus, written probably B.C. 26, when the latter was on an expedition against the Cantabrians. De Aenea quidem meo, si mehercule iam dignum auribus haberem tuis, libenter mitterem: sed tanta inchoata res est, ut paene vitiis mentis tantum opus ingressus mihi videar, cum praesertim, ut scio, alia quoque studia ad id opus multoque potiora impretiar. Macrob. Sat. 1, 24, 12.

this, as we have remarked, could hardly be otherwise in his age), no doubt he did commit the heinous crime of anachronism, but he sins in this along with Shakespeare and Milton, and there is no doubt that his hero Aeneas is cold-blooded and uninteresting.

Excellencies.—These defects, however, are far more than counterbalanced by his many excellencies. “There is in Vergil a great tenderness of feeling, something better and more charming than mere Roman virtue or morality. That he excels in pathos, as Homer in sublimity, is an old opinion, and it is surely the right one. This pathos is given at times by a single epithet, by a slight touch, with graceful art by an indirect allusion ; this tenderness is more striking as contrasted with the stern Roman character and with the stately majesty of the verse. The poet never becomes affected or sentimental ; he hardly ever offends against good taste ; he knows where to stop ; he is excellent in his silence as well as in his speech ; Vergil, as Wordsworth says, is a master of language, but no one can really be a master of language unless he be also a master of thought, of which language is the expression. To the above-named qualities may be added picturesqueness in description ; variety and artistic taste in grouping incidents ; also dramatic power, particularly in Books I and IV.

Crutwell thus defends Vergil in regard to the main charge : “The Aeneid was meant to be, above all things, a national poem, carrying on the lines of thought, the style of speech, which national progress had chosen ; and it was not meant to eclipse, so much as to do honour to, early literature. Thus those bards who, like Ennius and Naevius, had done good service to Rome by singing, however rudely, her history, find their imagines ranged in the gallery of the Aeneid. Thus they met with the flamens and pontiffs, who drew up the ritual formularies ; with the antiquarians and pious scholars, who had sought to find a meaning in the innumerable names, whether of place or custom or person ; with the magistrates, novelists and philosophers, who had striven to ennoble and enlighten Roman virtue, with the Greek singers and sages, for they, too, had helped to rear the towering fabric of Roman greatness. All these meet together in the Aeneid, as in solemn conclave, to review their joint work, to acknowledge its final completion, and to predict its impending downfall. This is beyond question the explanation of the wholesale appropriation of others' thoughts and language, which would otherwise be sheer plagiarism."

The object that Vergil had in writing the Aeneid is variously stated by writers. Spence, Holdsworth and Warton say that the poem was written with a political object to reconcile the Romans to the new order of things. This view is also held by Pope, who says that the poem had as much a political object as Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel; that its primary object was to praise Augustus, and the secondary one was to flatter the Romans by dwelling on the splendour of their origin. "Augustus is evidently typified under the character of Aeneas, both are cautious and wise in counsel; both are free from the perturbations of passion; they were cold, unfeeling, and uninteresting; their wisdom and policy were worldly-minded and calculating. Augustus was conscious that he was acting a part, as his last words show; and the contrast between the sentiment and conduct of Aeneas, whenever the warm impulses of affection might be supposed to have sway, likewise created an impression of insincerity. The characteristic virtue which adorns the hero of the Aeneid as the epithet pius, so constantly applied to him shows, was filial piety, and there was no virtue which Augustus more ostentatiously put forward than dutiful affection to Julius Caesar who adopted him."—BROWNE.

METRE.

The Aeneid is written in the heroic metre of the Romans; viz.: the dactylic hexameter. This was the most ancient as well as the most dignified form of verse among the Greeks and Romans. It was cultivated at an early period, far beyond the beginnings of authentic history, as we find it in its most perfect shape in the poems of Homer and Hesiod, and the responses of the Delphic oracle. Ennius is said to have discarded the rude Saturnian metre of his predecessors, and to have introduced the hexameter among the Romans. Vergil is generally considered as the model of this kind of verse among the Latins.

The dactylic hexameter consists, as its name implies, of six feet, the first four of which may be dactyls or spondees; the fifth is usually dactyl, and the sixth invariably a spondee. The following is the scheme :

Rules for Quantity.

In scanning, the pupil should understand that his general knowledge of quantity must be constantly brought into use. For example, from the outset of his studies he has learnt that -is of the dat. and abl. plur. is long, and -is of the gen. sing. is short. So -a of the nom. is short, and -a of the abl. is long. He knows also that a vowel before a final t is short. The following special rules may be helpful; in fact to make scanning easy they must be continually referred to.

1. A vowel before a vowel in the same word is short. Exceptions Aenēas and many other proper names, illius, etc.

2. A vowel before two consonants (not a mute and liquid) is long by position.

3. Before a mute and liquid (e.g., pl. tr) a vowel is common.

4. The prefix re- (back or again) and the enclitic -que are naturally short. They may of course be long by position.

5. Both for quantity and for elision (see sec. 5 below) the letter h does not count as a consonant. For instance, as in hic Dölō|pūnī mānūs| hic, B. II, 29, the us is short as if before one consonant; and in meminiss(e) horret, B. II, 12, e is elided as before a vowel.

Peculiarities of Metre.

1. For the comparative number of dactyls and spondees in the first four places no definite rule can be given. Generally speaking, the line is more smooth when the arrangement is varied to avoid monotony. A succession of dactyls may be used for various reasons, e.g.:

a sudden feeling, B. II, 120:

obstipuerē animis, gelidusque per ima cucurrit ossa tremor.

a sudden act : B. II, 553 :

*dextraque coruscum
extulit ac lateri capulo tenuis abdidit enseni.*

agitated feeling : B. II, 735 :

On the other hand a succession of spondees may be employed to describe a laboured effort : B. II, 561.

*ut regem aequaeuum crudeli vulnere vidi
vitam exhalentem ;*

Where the death of king Priam is described.

So also, B. II, 416 :

*adversi rupto ceu quondam turbine venti
confligunt,*

When warring winds engage in strife.

2. Rarely the fifth foot is a spondee, in which case the verse is called a spondaic<sup>25</sup> line : e.g., B. II, 68. Spondaic line.

constitit, atque oculis Phrygia agmina circumspexit :

The measured look of Sinon slowly scanning his audience is well brought out by the last word.

3. When the last syllable of a word remains over, after the completion of a foot, that syllable is called a caesural syllable, in consequence of its being separated, or cut off, as it were, from the rest of the word in scanning the verse. The term caesura<sup>26</sup> is also applied to a pause or stress of the voice, which naturally rests on the caesural syllable. The melody of the verse depends in a great measure on the position of the caesura. The chief verse caesuras in the dactylic hexameter are : Word Caesura.

(a) Penthemimera<sup>27</sup> Caesura at the end of the first syllable of the third foot : B. II, 8. Penthemimera Caesura.

(b) Hepthemimera<sup>28</sup> Caesura, at the end of the first syllable of the fourth foot : B. II, 2. Hepthemimera Caesura.

<sup>25</sup>In Vergil we have 28 spondaic lines : 17 of these end in a quadrisyllable, 9 in a trisyllable, 2 in a monosyllable.

<sup>28</sup>From ἑπτα, seven ; ἡμι, half ; μέρος a part or foot ; hence the seventh-half-foot caesura.

Trochaic Caesura.

(c) Trochaic<sup>29</sup> Caesura, after the trochees of the third foot :
B. II, 3.

Īnfān|dūm, rē|gīnā'', iŭ|bēs rēnō|vārē dō|lōrēm.

*Bucolic.

(d) Bucolic<sup>30</sup> Caesura, at the end of the dactyl of the fourth foot when this foot is a dactyl and ends the word : B. II, 99.

In vŭl|g(um) āmbīgŭ|ās ēt| quāerērē'' |cōnscŭs|ārñā.

It may be observed, generally, that a verse may have one, two, or three caesuras ; that verse, however, is best divided in which the sense pause and the caesural pause coincide as in each case given above.

4. The last word in a dactylic hexameter line is for the most part a dissyllable,<sup>31</sup> or a trisyllable. A quadrisyllable is rarely allowed, except in the case of a proper name. Sometimes, but rarely, a monosyllable is employed at the end of a line, and generally in the case of est, and then usually with an elision : See B. II, 68, 163, 250.

5. Metrical figures :

(a) Elision occurs when a word ends in a vowel or diphthong, or with the letter -m preceded by a vowel and the following word begins with a vowel, diphthong, or the letter h. When such is the case the last syllable of the word so ending in a vowel, diphthong, or the letter -m preceded by a vowel is elided, i.e., struck out altogether in scansion, and is not regarded as a part of the verse, as B. II, 1,

In the first the e final is elided both in contingere and in intentique before omnes and ora.

In the second the diphthong -ae in certae is elided before occumbere.

<sup>30</sup>So called because often employed by Vergil in his pastoral or Bucolic poetry. This caesura is common in the poems of Theocritus.

<sup>31</sup>Leaving out the three unfinished lines in the first book of the Aeneid we have 420 dissyllabic ; 323 trisyllabic ; 8 monosyllabic ; 2 quadrisyllabic endings.

This is also called synizesis.

(d) Synapheia is the principle of continuous scansion. It Synapheia. sometimes happens that a final vowel, diphthong, or -m preceded by a vowel at the end of a line is elided before an initial vowel, diphthong, or h at the beginning of the next line: B. II, 745.

The -que is joined to the aut of the next line.

There are in Vergil altogether twenty-one such hyper-Hypermetrical lines. metrical lines.

(e) Ictus is the beat of the foot which corresponds with Ictus. the elevation of the voice (ᾅσις). This naturally falls on the first syllable of a foot, and we, therefore, find cases occurring in which a syllable naturally short is lengthened, simply from its occupying the ordinary place of a long syllable: B. II, 563.

See also B. II, 411.

Nōstrōrum| ōbrūī|mūr, ōrīt|ūrquē mīs|ērrīmā| cāedēs.

Note that -us in domus (Nom.) is long, and -ur in obruimur.

This happens when the caesural pause and the pause in the sense are coincident.

THE TROJAN WAR.

Like Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, the Aeneid is based upon events supposed to have happened in that legendary and romantic episode known as the Trojan War. These events, as depicted in literature, are almost entirely poetic and not in the strict sense historical. The legend is that once there was a wealthy and powerful city named Ilium or Troja on the coast of Asia Minor. In a contest between the three goddesses, Venus, Juno and Minerva for the Apple of Discord, Venus was awarded the prize by the young Trojan prince Paris (or Alexander), son of King Priam. Paris, who at the time was being brought up as a shepherd boy on Mt. Ida and had been chosen judge for the contest, was bribed by Venus with the promise that she would give him the most beautiful woman in the world for wife. This woman proved to be Helen, wife of Menelaus, king of Sparta.

Paris, on a visit to the court of Menelaus during the absence of the latter, enticed Helen to elope with him to Troy. Menelaus, to recover his wife and punish the Trojans for harboring her, assembled a large army of Greeks, led by various petty Grecian kings and commanded by Menelaus' brother, Agamemnon, king of Argos and Mycenae. This army laid siege to Troy. After the siege had lasted ten years, by the stratagem of a huge wooden horse filled with soldiery the city was captured and burnt, and all but a remnant of the inhabitants put to the sword. This remnant scattered to different localities around the coast of the Mediterranean. According to the Roman legend, Aeneas, led by the Fates, conducted a party of Trojans to the west coast of Italy and there founded the colony from which afterwards grew the "Eternal City," Rome.

STORY OF THE AENEID.

Ancestors of Aeneas.

Aeneas was the son of Anchises and Venus, and thus connected with the royal family of Troy. In the earlier stages of the war he did not take any part, and not till his flocks were driven from Mount Ida by Achilles did he lead his followers against the Greeks. When the Greeks, after a siege of ten years, took the city, according to Vergil, Aeneas carries off on his shoulders the aged Anchises, takes young Ascanius by the hand while Creusa follows behind, and escapes to Mount Ida. His wife Creusa, in the confusion of the siege, is lost in the darkness. He appears to have left the burning city at the end of the war, when, with a fleet of twenty vessels and a number of followers, he set sail from Troy in quest of lands destined by the fates. He first lands in Thrace, and begins to build a city, but is deterred by the ghost of the murdered Polydorus. Next he sails to Delos, then to Crete, where the Penates appear to Aeneas, and declare his destined home to be in Italy, the native land of Dardanus. Again he sets sail and is driven by a storm to Strophades, Leucadia, and Chaonia, where he finds Helenus, At the Strophades. a seer, son of Priam, and king of that country, who tells Aeneas to sail round Sicily. The ships of Aeneas land in the country of the Cyclops Polyphemus, near Aetna, when At Sicily. Achaemenides, whom Ulysses had left behind in the cave of the Cyclops, advises them to flee from the land of Polyphemus. Guided by Achaemenides, Aeneas passes Scylla and Charybdis and lands at Drepanum, where Anchises dies. He then starts out for Italy, but stress of weather drives him on the coast of Africa, near Karthage. Juno, aware that Rome At Karthage one day would conquer her beloved Karthage, had an unrelenting hatred against Aeneas, and instigated Aeolus to let loose the winds and wreck the Trojan fleet. Neptune, however, interferes in time and calms the troubled waves. The Trojans find a sheltered harbour for the seven remaining ships and soon they land. They afterwards discover that they are on the coast of Africa. Jupiter had meanwhile despatched Mercury to prepare Dido to give a kind welcome to the shipwrecked followers of Aeneas. Surrounded by a cloud, and invisible to all, Aeneas and Achates go to explore the country. They see the towers and walls of the youthful city, and are surprised to find their missing comrades holding audience with the queen. Under the guise of Ascanius, Cupid is sent by Venus to kindle love in the breast of Dido. Dido is married to Aeneas. Other fortunes the fates had in store for him. Mercury is sent to remonstrate with Aeneas. In spite of the love and entreaties of Dido, the order is given to sail, and once more the Trojans steer for Italy. Dido, Dido kills herself. through grief for her fickle lover, mounts the funeral pile and stabs herself, and then her attendants burn her body. He Arrives at Sicily a second time. arrives a second time at Drepanum, and then for nine days celebrates the funeral games in honour of his dead father, Anchises. While the games were in progress, some of the Trojan women, despairing of ever having a settled home, fire the ships. Jupiter sends rain and puts out the fire, but not till after four ships are destroyed. Aeneas leaves in Sicily all the elderly people and all weary of roaming, where they found Segesta. The rest sail for Italy and land at Cumae. Then he meets the Sibyl, under whose guidance he descends to the lower world and learns the full details of his future life. Latinus, king of the land on which Aeneas landed, had a daughter Lavinia, whose hand is sought for by Turnus, king of the Rutuli. The Latins summon allies from all sides to repel the foreigners, while Aeneas obtains the aid of Evander, and seeks the assistance of the Etrurians. While he is absent, the Trojan camp is attacked without success by Turnus and the Latins. Aeneas returns and displays his prowess in battle. He slays Mezentius, the Etruscan, and Turnus, and afterwards marries Lavinia.

THE CONTENTS OF THE SECOND BOOK.

Introductory.

The first book of the Aeneid relates how, when off the coast of Sicily, seven years after the fall of Troy, a great storm fell upon the fleet of Aeneas, and drove it upon the shores of Libya, where he and his comrades were hospitably received by Dido, queen of Karthage, in her newly-built capital. At the conclusion of a royal banquet given in their honor, Dido entreats Aeneas to tell the tale of Troy's destruction and his own wanderings. The second and third books of the Aeneid contain the narrative of these events.

Compare with this the narrative of Ulysses to Alcinous in the Odyssey, bks. 9-12.

story.*

1-13. Aeneas, amid breathless silence, thus begins: "Thou biddest me tell a tale of woe, O queen, and thus renew unutterable sorrow, but, though my mind shudders at the remembrance, I address myself to the task."

12-24. Baffled in all their attempts to capture Troy, the Greeks build a huge wooden horse, in which they conceal their most noted leaders. They pretend it is a votive offering to Minerva to ensure a safe return home. They then withdraw with all their ships to Tenedos, an island near Troy.

*The Greeks
sail to Tenedos.*

Joy of the Trojans.

25-39. The Trojans, in joy at the departure of their enemies, sally forth and delight to inspect the deserted shore.

*Conflicting opinions regarding the
horse.*

Conflicting opinions prevail as to what should be done with the horse. Some advise to destroy it; others to bring it into the city.

40-56. Laocoon, priest of Neptune, distrusts the Greeks, Laocoon's warning.
 "even when bearing gifts." To emphasize his fear of strategy, he hurls his mighty spear against the belly of the horse, which gives an ominously hollow sound.

57-76. Meanwhile a young Greek named Sinon has been Sinon appears on the scene.
 captured, and is dragged before King Priam. He has purposely thrown himself in the way, with the object of deceiving the Trojans. He simulates fear, but is reassured by the Trojans, who bid him give an account of himself.

 of the betrayal of his companion-in-arms, Palamedes, by Ulysses, his own grief and indignation, and the dire revenge of Ulysses. He tragically breaks off his story just as he His escape from the Greeks.
 reaches the most exciting part, and calls upon them to slay him at once and gratify the Grecian leaders. Burning with curiosity the Trojans bid him proceed, and he does so, feigning emotion. The Greeks had long desired to return home, and had been prevented only by adverse weather, particularly when they had erected this horse to propitiate Minerva. An oracle of Apollo informed them that, as they had appeased the winds, on leaving Greece, by the blood of a slain virgin, so now they must seek return by the sacrificing of a Grecian life. Calchas, the seer, after ten days' silence, named Sinon as the doomed one, and all acquiesce. As the day of sacrifice approaches he snatches himself from death by fleeing to a marsh and hiding till the Greeks have gone. Sinon concludes his tale by a most pathetic reference to the probable fate of his family at home, and breaks down in tears.

145-198. His tears have the desired effect. Priam orders his fetters to be removed, bids him forget the Greeks, become Sinon pretends to explain the object of the horse.
 a Trojan, and tell them why the horse was built. After again "protesting too much" his pure intentions, Sinon proceeds to explain that the anger of Minerva was kindled against the Greeks by the stealing of the Palladium—the sacred image of Minerva, on the possession of which the safety of Troy depended. Calchas declared that they must return to Greece and seek fresh auspices. Meanwhile they must set up this horse as a propitiatory offering to Minerva, and build it huge and high to prevent the Trojans from bringing it into the city, and thus securing the divine protection it would carry with it. Tricked by this perjured art the Trojans yield to the temptation so subtly put in their way, and "those whom neither Tydeus' son nor Larissæan Achilles, ten years nor a thousand ships could conquer," succumb to the wiles of Sinon.

Laocoon.*

199-233. And now, as if to abet the treacherous Sinon, Minerva sends from Tenedos two serpents to attack Laocoon, as he is sacrificing at the altar. Side by side they swim the channel, and with deadly aim make for the two sons of the priest. After strangling the two boys, they turn upon Laocoon himself as he comes to the rescue. His horrifying shrieks rend the air. At last the serpents, their deadly work over, seek the shelter of Minerva's statue, and nestle at her feet. This intimation is all the superstitious Trojans require. Laocoon's warning is now regarded as sacrilege, and his fate as a punishment from Heaven.

234-249. Deceived by Sinon and influenced by the omen, the Trojans make an opening in their walls, and, with the singing of boys and girls, draw the monster into the city. Four times it is halted, and four times the arms within give forth an ominous sound. But blinded and heedless the Trojans persist, and station the horse in the very citadel. Cassandra prophesies the dreadful result, but, as usual, is disbelieved. Ignorant of their pending fate the hapless Trojans deck themselves and celebrate the event.

*The Greeks
by night
take possession

250-267. Meanwhile night shrouds the city and "the wiles of the Greeks"; the Trojans rest in peaceful slumbers from the unwonted excitement and merry-making of the day; the fleet steals back from Tenedos; and Sinon, under cover of the darkness, releases the pent-up Grecian heroes. The night-watches are slain, and, admitting their comrades through the open gates, the Greeks set out on their work of murder and destruction.

*The shade of Hector
Aeneas.*

268-297. The shade of Hector appears to Aeneas in his sleep, and, informing him of the true situation, bids him flee the city. Hector places the image of Vesta and the sacred fire in Aeneas' hands and tells him to build for the household gods of Troy a new city beyond the seas.

298-317. Aeneas awakes, rushes to the top of his father's house, and beholds the city in flames. He frantically seizes his arms, resolving to hasten to the citadel, and, if necessary, to die fighting.

318-369. As he rushes forth, he is met by Panthus, priest of Apollo, who has just escaped from the citadel. In response to enquiries, Panthus tells how the city has been captured. Aeneas hastens towards the scene of conflict and is joined by several Trojans, among whom is Coroebus, the betrothed of Cassandra. Exhorted by Aeneas, this band moves on like a pack of hungry wolves. Terrible is the slaughter, and manifold are the scenes of death.

370-434. Not all on one side is the carnage. Androgeos and a large band of Greeks are taken unawares, and slain. On the suggestion of Coroebus, the victorious Trojans don the armour of the fallen Greeks, and continue their deadly work in disguise. Dismay is spread among the Greeks. But, alas! it is useless to fight against the fates. Coroebus spies Cassandra dragged along in chains, and rushes to her rescue. Here weapons of their friends kill many of the Trojans, who are mistaken for Greeks; and the Greeks, suddenly discovering the deception, rally from all quarters and overwhelm the followers of Aeneas. Coroebus and others fall, the remainder are scattered.

434-505. Aeneas, with only two followers, now makes his way to the abode of Priam. Here the brunt of the battle rages, the Greeks assaulting and the Trojans stoutly defending. Aeneas enters by a secret door in the rear and goes out upon the roof. He pries up a turret and hurls it down upon the Greeks beneath. Many are crushed by the fall, but others press on.

Pyrrhus, in glittering armour, smashes in the door, and through the opening the terrified inmates can be seen. Meanwhile despair and confusion reign within. The Greeks, led by Pyrrhus, come pouring in like the resistless tide of a river. The household is slain and the palace wrecked.

506-558. The aged king, seeing his palace in the hands of the enemy, girds on his armour, resolved to die in arms. His wife, Hecuba, as she clings to the altar in the middle of the court sees him and calls upon him to take refuge with her. Poltes, one of Priam's sons, rushes in and is slain by Pyrrhus before his father's eyes. The old man breaks forth into an angry denunciation of the murderer, but the latter turns on him, and with the words, "Take this message to my father in Hades, and be sure to tell him his son is degenerate," he plunges his sword to the hilt in the old man's side. The body of the once proud ruler of Asia now lies nameless and exposed on the shore.

559-633. Aeneas suddenly finds himself alone, when he espies Helen crouching in concealment by the temple of Vesta. Indignant at the thought of her returning home in triumph from the city which she has ruined, he is on the point of slaying her, but he is suddenly checked by his goddess mother, Venus. The latter bids him think of rescuing his family, leaving Helen to her fate. Not Helen, but the gods have brought about the downfall of Troy. The gods are then revealed to Aeneas assisting the Greeks in the destruction of the city. Aeneas' eyes are opened to the futility of further resistance, and, protected by Venus, he passes to his home.

634-729. Aeneas endeavours to persuade his father to flee, but the latter refuses. In vain do all the household implore him to yield. Aeneas in despair calls for his arms, and is about to rush forth to his death, when Creusa beseeches him to remain and defend his home and family. Suddenly a supernatural light plays harmlessly about the head of the young Iulus. It is regarded as an omen by Anchises, who calls upon Jupiter to ratify it. A favourable response being given, Anchises consents to accompany Aeneas. The latter takes his father on his shoulders, and, with Iulus at his side and Creusa following at a distance, hastens out of the city.

Loss of Creusa.

730-770. Hurrying along, in terror at every sight and sound, Aeneas is suddenly alarmed by approaching foes, and in the excitement becomes separated from Creusa. Not till he reaches the temple of Ceres outside the walls, does he miss her. His anguish then is heart-rending.

Leaving father, son and companions, he returns in quest of Creusa. From place to place he goes. The Greeks hold everything; yet he fills the air with cries for the lost Creusa.

771-795. Suddenly the shade of Creusa confronts him. In affectionate terms she bids him grieve for her no longer, but bow to the will of Heaven. She then unfolds his future career, and vanishes. In The shade of Creusa appears to Aeneas.

796-804. Recovering from his astonishment, Aeneas returns to his companions. He finds a pitiable throng collected to accompany him into exile. And now as the morning star rises above Ida, he again takes his father on his shoulders and "flees to the mountains." Aeneas flees to the mountains.

LITERARY NOTES.

If the Aeneid is to be read at all, it ought to be read as a work of art. Were mere facility in translating Latin aimed at, the pupil should be kept at prose authors until he graduates from the High School. Our curriculum, however, is based upon the theory that while the young student is acquiring technical familiarity with the process of translation, he can to some degree be brought face to face with the fact that the material he is working with is literature,—literature with a living, breathing soul, and a more or less attractive body; that the two great divisions of literature—prose and poetry—existed in Latin as they do in English; and that the distinction between the two was as keenly felt in the days of Horace and Vergil, as it is in the days of Tennyson and Browning.

That the pupil can be brought face to face with this fact, without conscious effort on his own part, or even that of the teacher, is a matter to be thankful for. Still what would be thought of our methods of teaching English literature, were they founded upon the principle that unconscious absorption of the beauties of poetry is all that our school programme requires? A knowledge, however limited, of the technicalities of art, increases the taste for art itself. If then our university matriculants can with profit study the technique of a Tennyson or a Wordsworth, there appears to be no good reason why those same students should not, while turning Vergil into English, examine in some simple and easy manner the devices by which that poet sought to render his message attractive.

The following brief notes, framed along this line, are inserted here with the hope that they may prove to some small degree suggestive, but suggestive merely, to the enthusiastic teacher of Latin.

light of that desolate morning on which, with hope faintly struggling into their breasts, the exiles are to face the world in quest of a new and distant home. And the central figure of it all is Aeneas, with the wound of Creusa's loss still aching. What a hush would fall upon the listening throng in Dido's banquet-hall as Aeneas thus sadly draws to a close this terrible chapter of his life !)

“ This having said, she left me all in tears,
And minding much to speak ; but she was gone,
And subtly fled into the weightless air.
Thrice rought I with mine arms to accoll her neck ;
Thrice did my hands' vain hold the inage escape,
Like nimble winds, and like the flying dream.
So, night spent out, return I to my feres :
And there, wondering, I find together swarmed
A new number of mates, mothers, and men ;
A rout exiled, a wretched multitude,
From each-where flock together, prest to pass
With heart and goods to whatsoever land
By sliding seas me listed them to lead.
And now rose Lucifer above the ridge
Of lusty Ide, and brought the dawning light.
The Greeks held the entries of the gates beset,
Of help there was no hope. Then gave I place, Took up my sire, and hasted to the hill.” —SURREY.

CREUSA'S FAREWELL.

768—795.

Analysis for Pathos.

I.—THE EFFECTIVE PRELUDE.

(a) The intense grief of Aeneas : “ impleri clamore vias maestus-que Creusam nequiquam ingeminans iterumque iterumque vocavi.” Observe, by the way, the endearing use of the name Creusa all through ; particularly in v. 784.

(b) The fright and terror of Aeneas on the appearance of the Spectre.

II.—THE FAREWELL.

“ O dulcis coniunx.”

The tenderness of, the argument used to assuage his grief :—

(a) Her loss decreed by Heaven.

(b) A happy future awaits him. (Note the unselfishness in “ regia coniunx parva tibi.”)

(c) She is saved by death from the dreaded life of a captive slave; (note the force in the contrast between "Graiiis servitum matribus ibo" and "divae Veneris nurus.")

(d) The little son Iulus lives, as a seal of their love and a bond between the living and the dead.

Observe the tenderness in "lacrimas dilectae pelle Creusae" (the third person "Creusae" for "mei"); and in "Nati serva communis amorem."

III.—THE SEQUEL.

The grief of Aeneas at the vanishing of Creusa—his frantic efforts to embrace the empty shadow.

Deseruit—"Observe the tender reproach contained in this word; observe, also, that it is spoken, not of Creusa (on whom the exquisite judgment of the poet is careful not to throw even the shadow of an imputation), but of the apparition, against which it falls harmless, while at the same time it expresses the bereavement of Aeneas, and his affection towards his wife."—HENRY.

QUESTIONS.

1. Discuss the attitude of Vergil towards :—

(a) Womanhood, e.g., Cassandra, Hecuba, and Creusa.

(b) Old age, e.g., Laocoon, Priam, Anchises.

(c) A young and lusty warrior, e.g., Aeneas, Pyrrhus.

2. Make a synopsis of the episode of Sinon, noting Vergil's aim and method in developing the story.

3. Write a note on the introduction of the supernatural in Book II. How far is this subjective?

4. Make a list of the similes in Book II. In each distinguish the essential from the non-essential or ornamental. N.B.—The similes are italicized in the text.

5. In discussing Vergil's use of simile, Mr. Sidgwick says : "The art is shown in the workmanship rather than in the choice of the comparison; in its vividness, beauty, and truth of detail. . . . This is what we may call the primitive use of the simile. . . . There is however a modern use of the simile which is quite different. If we open Shelley we read :

The golden gates of sleep unbar
 Where strength, and beauty, met together,
 Kindle their image like a star
In a sea of glassy weather.

Here there is nothing obvious in the comparison." . . . Examine the aptness of Mr. Sidgwick's criticism with reference to each of the similes in the book.

6. Point out the beauty of "workmanship" in the simile that compares the fall of Troy to the fall of a stately ash, 626-631.

7. Point out instances of Poetic Grammar as used by Vergil. See explanatory notes, and a list of grammatical peculiarities.

EXTRACTS AND COMMENTS.

"Vergil is the first of Latin poets, and one of the first poets of the world: and the Aeneid is his greatest work. Propertius announced the forthcoming poem in the well-known line, "Nescio quid maior nascitur Iliade": and from the day of its publication it was a classic and no Roman refers to it except to praise. No poet has been more deeply loved and revered by the best in all ages: and to two of the greatest he was one main source of inspiration. Milton's Paradise Lost is filled with memories of Vergil: and Dante calls him his guide and his master.

It is obvious that the sort of merit that is implied by facts like these cannot be explained to the learner in a few pages of preface to a school-book. To appreciate Vergil thoroughly requires a fine natural sensibility to poetry, a real and intimate knowledge of Latin and perhaps some experience of life: and even then it cannot be taught, it must come from within. Much, however, can be done even by beginners, if the poet himself be read with care, and with desire to appreciate. Some help, too, can be gained by reading the best poetic translations (e.g., Conington and Bowen), and the best criticisms on the poet's work (e.g., Prof. Nettleship's "Suggestions Introductory to a study of the Aeneid," Prof. Sellar's treatise and an essay by Mr. F.W.H. Myers).—SIDGWICK.

Further, in characterizing the Second Book as one of "the three great books," viz., II, IV, and VI, which justify our admiration of the Aeneid, Mr. Sidgwick remarks:—

"In the first of these, the Tragedy of Troy, we find perhaps the best specimen of the truly epic quality of Vergil: the stately and pathetic narrative given in poetry at once powerful, picturesque and melodious. The subject also affords full scope for other special characteristics of the poet; his reverence for the gods, his feeling of the power of fate, and his deep sense of the sadness of human life. All these are shown in relating the struggle of the doomed city, with the very gods against it: the "dramatic irony" of the Greek fraud beguiling the Trojans to assist in their own destruction; the disregarded prophecies and tragic fates of Laocoon and Cassandra; the fall of the royal greatness, and the cruel death of Priam and his house."

"Of the metre it must suffice to say broadly that Vergil truly created it, and that it died with him. . . . Vergil alone unfolded and commanded its full resources. In one word his superiority consists, on the more technical side, in a far greater variety of rhythm, by his use of elision, pause, caesura, and arrangement of feet; and on the higher side in an infinitely more subtle sense both of sound and of the power of language."

"Lastly, there is the more peculiar quality, closely connected with those referred to, but more profound, which only the greatest poets possess: the art whereby the words that seem the simplest, and are naturally spoken of the incidents and actors in the drama, have somehow a wider significance and touch deeper springs in our nature; words which haunt the memory with a charm and a force which we cannot ever fully explain. . . . Dr. Newman speaks of Vergil's "single words and phrases, his pathetic half lines giving utterance as the voice of nature herself to that pain and weariness yet hope of better things which is the experience of her children in every time."—SIDGWICK.

In connection with the above it would be a fruitful exercise for the student to cultivate the habit of discerning and noting these "single words and phrases" that "haunt the memory." For example take "Dis aliter visum," "quorum pars magna fui," and "adsensere omnes, et, quae sibi quisque timebat, unius in miseri exitium conversa tulere."

SCENE—Dido's Court, Karthage.

AENEAS BEGINS HIS STORY OF THE FALL OF TROY.

Conticuere omnes, intentique ora tenebant.
inde toro Pater Aeneas sic orsus ab alto :
“infandum, regina, iubes renovare dolorem, Troianos ut opes et lamentabile regnum eruerint Danaï, quaeque ipse miserrima vidi, et quorum pars magna fui. quis talia fando Myrmidonum Dolopumve aut duri miles Ulixi temperet a lacrimis ? et iam nox umida caelo praecipitat, suadentque cadentia sidera somnos,

sed si tantus amor casus cognoscere nostros, 10
 et breviter Troiae supremum audire laborem, quamquam animus meminisse horret luctuque refugit incipiam.

THE WOODEN HORSE.

fracti bello fatisque repulsi
 ductores Danaum, tot iam labentibus annis, instar montis equum divina Palladis arte 15
 aedificant, sectaque intexunt abiete costas :
 votum pro reditu simulant ; ea fama vagatur.
 huc delecta virum sortiti corpora furtim includunt caeco lateri, penitusque cavernas ingentes utrumque armato milite complent. 20

THE GREEKS RETIRE TO TENEDOS.

Joy of the Trojans.—Conflicting opinions as to the disposal of the horse.

est in conspectu Tenedos, notissima fama
 insula, dives opum, Priami dum regna manebant, nunc tantum sinus et statio male fida carinis :
 huc se provecti deserto in litore condunt.
 nos abiisse rati et vento petiisse Mycenae. 25
 ergo omnis longo solvit se Teucra luctu :
 panduntur portae ; iuvat ire et Dorica castra desertosque videre locos litusque relictum.
 hic Dolopum manus, hic saevus tendebat Achilles ;
 classibus hic locus, hic acie certare solebant. 30
 pars stupet innuptae donum exitiale Minervae, et molem mirantur equi ; primusque Thymoetes duci intra muros hortatur et arce locari, sive dolo, seu iam Troiae sic fata ferebant

at Capys, et quorum melior sententia menti, 35
aut pelago Danaum insidias suspectaque dona praecipitare iubent, subiectisque urere flammis :
aut terebrare cavas uteri et temptare latebras.

LAOCOON'S WARNING.

"Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes"—He hurls his spear at the horse.

primus ibi ante omnes, magna comitante caterva, 40 Laocoon ardens summa decurrit ab arce ;
et procul : 'o miseri, quae tanta insania, cives ?
creditis avectos hostes ? aut ulla putatis dona carere dolis Danaum ? sic notus Ulixes ?
aut hoc inclusi ligno occultantur Achivi, 45
aut haec in nostros fabricata est machina muros inspectura domos venturaque desuper urbi ;
aut aliquis latet error : equo ne credite, Teucri.
quidquid id est, timeo Danaos et dona ferentes.'
sic fatus validis ingentem viribus hastam 50
in latus inque feri curvam compagibus alvum contorsit. stetit illa tremens, uteroque recusso insonuere cavae gemitumque dedere cavernae.
et, si fata deum, si mens non laeva fuisset, impulerat ferro Argolicas foedare latebras ; 55
Troiaque nunc staret, Priamique arx alta, maneres.

SINON'S PERFDY.

ecce, manus iuvenem interea post terga revinctum
pastores magno ad regem clamore trahebant Dardanidae, qui se ignotum venientibus ultro, hoc ipsum ut strueret Troiamque aperiret Achivis, 60

 obtulerat, fidens animi, atque in utrumque paratus, seu versare dolos, seu certae occumbere morti.
 undique visendi studio Troiana iuventus circumfusa ruit, certantque inludere capto.
 accipe nunc Danaum insidias, et crimine ab uno 65
 disce omnes.
 namque ut conspectu in medio turbatus inermis
 constitit, atque oculis Phrygia agmina circumspexit :
 'heu, quae nunc tellus,' inquit, 'quae me aequora possunt accipere? aut quid iam misero mihi denique restat 70
 cui neque apud Danaos usquam locus, et super ipsi Dardanidae infensi poenas cum sanguine poscunt?'
 quo gemitu conversi animi, compressus et omnis impetus. hortamur fari; quo sanguine cretus, quidve ferat, memoret, quae sit fiducia capto. 75
 ille haec, deposita tandem formidine, fatur :

Sinon's story of persecution by Ulysses.

'cuncta equidem tibi, rex, fuerit quodcumque, fatebor vera,' inquit : 'neque me Argolica de gente negabo :
 hoc primum; nec, si miserum fortuna Sinonem finxit, vanum etiam mendacemque improba finget. 80
 fando aliquod si forte tuas pervenit ad aures

 dum stabat regno incolumis, regumque vige-gessimus. invidia postquam pellacis Ulixi— 90

 haud ignota loquor—superis concessit ab oris, adflictus vitam in tenebris luctuque trahebam,
 et casum insontis mecum indignabar amici.
 nec tacui demens; et me, fors si qua tulisset, si patrios unquam remeassem victor ad Argos, 95
 promisi ultorem, et verbis odia aspera movi.
 hinc mihi prima mali labes; hinc semper Ulixes criminibus terrere novis; hinc spargere voces in vulgum ambiguas, et quaerere conscius arma.
 nec requievit enim, donec Calchante ministro— 100
 sed quid ego haec autem nequiquam ingrata revolve?
 quidve moror, si omnes uno ordine habetis Achivos, idque audire sat est? iamdudum sumite poenas:
 hoc Ithacus velit, et magno mercentur Atridae.
 tum vero ardemus scitari et quaerere causas, 105
 ignari scelerum tantorum artisque Pelasgae.”
 prosequitur pavitans, et ficto pectore fatur:

 bis quinos silet ille dies, tectusque recusat

 vix tandem, magnis Ithaci clamoribus actus, composito rumpit vocem, et me destinat arae.
 adsensere omnes, et, quae sibi quisque timebat, 130

 iamque dies infanda aderat ; mihi sacra parari, sustulit exutas vinclis ad sidera palmas :

 “ vos aeterni ignes, et non violabile vestrum

omnis spes Danaum et coepti fiducia belli virgineas ausi divae contingere vittas ;

 ex illo fluere ac retro sublapsa referri spes Danaum ; fractae vires, aversa deae mens. 170
 nec dubiis ea signa dedit Tritonia monstis.
 vix positum castris simulacrum : arsere coruscae luminibus flammae arrectis, salsusque per artus sudor iit, terque ipsa solo—mirabile dictu—emicuit, parmamque ferens hastamque trementem. 175 extemplo temptanda fuga canit aequora Calchas ;

 nec posse Argolicis excindi Pergama telis, talibus insidiis periurique arte Sinonis 195

 credita res, captique dolis lacrimisque coactis quos neque Tydides, nec Larissaeus Achilles, non anni domuere decem, non mille carinae.

THE GHOST OF HECTOR WARNS AENEAS.

tempus erat, quo prima quies mortalibus aegris incipit, et dono divom gratissima serpit.
 in somnis, ecce, ante oculos maestissimus Hector 270
 visus adesse mihi, largosque effundere fletus, raptatus bigis, ut quondam, aterque cruento pulvere, perque pedes traiectus lora tumentes.
 hei mihi, qualis erat ! quantum mutatus ab illo Hectore, qui redit exuvias indutus Achilli, 275
 vel Danaum Phrygios iaculatus puppibus ignes !
 squalentem barbam, et concretos sanguine crines, vulneraque illa gerens, quae circum plurima muros accepit patrios. ultro flens ipse videbar compellare virum, et maestas expromere voces : 280 ‘ o lux Dardaniae, spes o fidissima Teucrum, quae tantae tenuere morae ? quibus Hector ab oris exspectate venis ? ut te post multa tuorum funera, post varios hominumque urbisque labores defessi aspicimus ! quae causa indigna serenos 285 foedavit voltus ? aut cur haec vulnera cerno ? ’
 ille nihil, nec me quaerentem vana moratur, sed graviter gemitus imo de pectore ducens, ‘ heu ! fuge, nate dea, teque his,’ ait, ‘ eripe flammis.
 hostis habet muros ; ruit alto a culmine Troia. 290

sat patriae Priamoque datum ; si Pergama dextra

 sic ait, et manibus vittas Vestamque potentem aeternumque adytis effert penetralibus ignem.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE CITY.

Aeneas awakes, rushes to the top of his father's house and beholds the city in flames.

diverso interea miscentur moenia luctu ;
 et magis atque magis, quamquam secreta parentis Anchisae domus arboribusque oblecta recessit, 300 clarescunt sonitus, armorumque ingruit horror.
 excutior somno, et summi fastigia tecti ascensu supero, atque arrectis auribus adsto ;

sternit agros, sternit sata laeta boumque labores,
praecipitesque trahit silvas, stupet inscius alto
accipiens sonitum saxi de vertice pastor.
 tum vero manifesta fides, Danaumque patescunt
 insidiae. iam Deïphobi dedit ampla ruinam, 310
 Vulcano superante, domus ; iam proximus ardet Ucalegon ; Sigea igni freta lata relucent :
 exoritur clamorque virum clangorque tubarum.
 arma amens capio ; nec sat rationis in armis ;
 sed glomerare manum bello et concurrere in arcem 315
 cum sociis ardent animi. furor ira que mentem praecipitant, pulchrumque mori succurrit in armis.

Panthus, priest of Apollo, brings tidings.

ecce autem telis Panthus elapsus Achivum, Panthus Othryades, arcis Phoebique sacerdos, sacra manu victosque deos parvumque nepotem 320
 ipse trahit, cursuque amens ad limina tendit.
 'quo res summa loco, Panthu? quam prendimus arcem?'
 vix ea fatus eram, gemitu cum talia reddit:
 'venit summa dies et ineluctabile tempus
 Dardaniae. fuimus Troes, fuit Ilium et ingens 325

talibus Othryadae dictis et numine divom in flammis et in arma feror, quo tristis Erinys, quo fremitus vocat et sublatus ad aethera clamor.
 addunt se socios Rhipeus et maximus armis Epytus, oblatis per lunam, Hypanisque Dymasque, 340 et lateri adglomerant nostro, iuvenisque Coroebus Mygdonides. illis ad Troiam forte diebus venerat, insano Cassandrae incensus amore, et gener auxilium Priamo Phrygibusque ferebat, infelix, qui non sponsae praecepta furentis 345
 audierit.

These he exhorts to face death bravely, and together they press on like a pack of hungry wolves.

quos ubi confertos audere in proelia vidi, incipio super his : 'iuvenes, fortissima frustra pectora, si vobis audentem extrema cupido certa sequi, quae sit rebus fortuna videtis : 350

excessere omnes, adytis arisque relictis, di, quibus imperium hoc steterat ; succurritis urbi incensae : moriamur, et in media arma ruamus una salus victis nullam sperare salutem.'

sic animis iuvenum furor additus. inde, lupi ceu 355
raptores atra in nebula, quos inproba ventris
exegit caecos rabies, catulique relictis

faucibus expectant siccis, per tela, per hostes vadimus haud dubiam in mortem, mediaquē tenemus urbis iter.

nox atra cava circumvolat umbra. 360

quis cladem illius noctis, quis funera fando explicet, aut possit lacrimis aequare labores ?

urbs antiqua ruit, multos dominata per annos ;
plurima perque vias sternuntur inertia passim corpora, perque domos et religiosa deorum 365

linina. nec soli poenas dant sanguine Teucri ;
quondam etiam victis redit in praecordia virtus, victoresque cadunt Danaï. crudelis ubique luctus, ubique pavor, et plurima mortis imago.

The tide of battle turns—Androgeos and his band of Greeks surprised and slaughtered.

primus se, Danaum magna comitante caterva, 370
Androgeos offert nobis, socia agmina credens inscius, atque ultro verbis compellat amici:

'festinate viri: nam quae tam sera moratur segnities? alii rapiunt incensa feruntque Pergama: vos celsis nunc primum a navibus itis!' 375
 dixit; et extemplo—neque enim responsa dabantur fida satis—sensit medios delapsus in hostes.
 obstipuit, retroque pedem cum voce repressit.
inprovisum aspris veluti qui sentibus anguem
pressit humi nitens, trepidusque repente refugit 380
attollentem iras, et caerula colla tumentem:
 haud secus Androgeos visu tremefactus abibat.
 inruimus, densis et circumfundimur armis, ignarosque loci passim et formidine captos
 sternimus. adspirat primo fortuna labori. 385

Donning the armour of the fallen Greeks, Aeneas and his followers spread terror among the invaders. "Multos Danaum demittimus Orco."

atque hic successu exsultans animisque Coroebus,
 'o socii, qua prima,' inquit, 'fortuna salutis monstrat iter, quaque ostendit se dextra, sequamur:
 mutemus clipeos, Danaumque insignia nobis aptemus. dolus an virtus, quis in hoste requirat?' 390
 arma dabunt ipsi.' sic fatus deinde comantem Androgei galeam clipeique insigne decorum induitur, laterique Argivum accommodat ensem.
 hoc Rhipeus, hoc ipse Dymas, omnisque iuventus laeta facit; spoliis se quisque recentibus armat. 395
 vadimus inmixti Danais haud numine nostro, multaue per caecam congressi proelia noctem conserimus; multos Danaum demittimus Orco.
 diffugiunt alii ad naves, et litora cursu fida petunt; pars ingentem formidine turpi 400 scandunt rursus equum, et nota conduntur in alvo.

heu nihil invitis fas quemquam fidere divis !
 ecce trahebatur passis Priameia virgo crinibus a templo Cassandra adytisque Minervae, ad caelum tendens ardentia lumina frustra, 405
 lumina, nam teneras arcebant vincula palmas.
 non tulit hanc speciem furiata mente Coroebus, et sese medium iniecit periturus in agmen.
 consequimur cuncti et densis incurrimus armis.
 hic primum ex alto delubri culmine telis 410
 nostrorum obruimur, oriturque miserrima caedes armorum facie et Graiarum errore iubarum.
 tum Danaï gemitu atque ereptae virginis ira undique collecti invadunt, accerrimus Ajax, et gemini Atridae, Dolopumque exercitus omnis : 415
adversi rupto ceu quondam turbine venti
configunt, Zephyrusque, Notusque, et laetus Eois Eurus equis : stridunt silvae, saevitque tridenti
spumens atque imo Nereus ciet aequora fundo.
 illi etiam, si quos obscura nocte per umbram 420
 fudimus insidiis, totaque agitavimus urbe, adparent ; primi clipeos mentitaque tela agnoscunt, atque ora sono discordia signant.

ilicet obruimur numero : primusque Coroebus Peneleï dextra divae armipotentis ad aram 425
 procumbit ; cadit et Rhipeus, iustissimus unus qui fuit in Teucris et servantissimus aequi ;
 dis aliter visum ; pereunt Hypanisque Dymasque, confixi a sociis ; nec te tua plurima, Panthu, labentem pietas, nec Apollinis infula textit. 430

 Iliaci cineres, et flamma extrema meorum, testor, in occasu vestro nec tela nec ullas vitavisse vices Danaum, et si fata fuissent, ut caderem, meruisse manu.

DESTRUCTION OF PRIAM'S PALACE.

divellimur inde :
 Iphitus et Pelias mecum ; quorum Iphitus aevo 435
 iam gravior, Pelias et vulnere tardus Ulixi ; protinus ad sedes Priami clamore vocati.
 hic vero ingentem pugnam, ceu cetera nusquam bella forent, nulli tota morerentur in urbe, sic Martem indomitum, Danaosque ad tecta ruentes 440
 cernimus, obsessumque acta testudine limen.
 haerent parietibus scalae, postesque sub ipsos nituntur gradibus, clipeosque ad tela sinistris protecti obiciunt, prensant fastigia dextris.
 Dardanidae contra turres ac tecta domorum 445
 culmina convellunt : his se, quando ultima cernunt, extrema iam in morte parant defendere telis ;
 auratasque trabes, veterum decora alta parentum, devolvunt : alii strictis mucronibus imas
 obsedere fores ; has servant agmine denso. 450

*Aeneas enters by a postern, rushes to the roof, and hurls a tower

instaurati animi, regis succurrere tectis, auxilioque levare viros, vimque addere victis.

limen erat caecaeque fores et pervius usus tectorum inter se Priami, postesque relictī a tergo, infelix qua se, dum regna manebant, 455
 saepius Andromache ferre incomitata solebat ad soceros, et avo puerum Astyanacta trahebat.
 evado ad summi fastigia culminis, unde
 tela manu miseri iactabant inrita Teucri.
 turrim in praecipiti stantem summisque sub astra 460
 eductam tectis, unde omnis Troia videri et Danaum solitae naves et Achaica castra, adgressi ferro circum, qua summa labantes iuncturas tabulata dabant, convellimus altis sedibus, inpulimusque : ea lapsa repente ruinam 465 cum sonitu trahit, et Danaum super agmina late incidit.

But in vain : Pyrrhus and others press forward—An opening in the door is made.

ast alii subeunt ; nec saxa, nec ullum telorum interea cessat genus.
 vestibulum ante ipsum primoque in limine Pyrrhus exsultat telis et luce coruscus aena : 470
qualis ubi in lucem coluber mala gramina pastus, frigida sub terra tumidum quem bruma tegebat, nunc positis novus exuvii nitidusque iuventa, lubrica convolvit sublato pectoris terga, arduus ad solem, et linguis micat ore trisulcis. 475
 una ingens Periphas et equorum agitator Achillis armiger Automedon, una omnis Scyria pubes succedunt tecto, et flammās ad culmina iactant.
 ipse inter primos correpta dura bipenni limina perrumpit, postesque a cardine vellit 480 aeratos ; iamque excisa trabe firma cavavit

robora, et ingentem lato dedit ore fenestram.
 • adparet domus intus, et atria longa patescunt ;
 adparent Priami et veterum penetralia regum, armatosque vident stantes in limine primo. 485

*Scene of despair within the palace—The dread Pyrrhus bursts in—
 The household slaughtered—"tenent Danaï, qua deficit ignis."*

at domus interior gemitu miseroque tumultu miscetur ; penitusque cavae plangoribus aedes femineis ululant ; ferit aurea sidera clamor.
 tum pavidæ tectis matres ingentibus errant, amplexæque tenent postes, atque oscula figunt. 490
 instat vi patria Pyrrhus ; nec claustra, neque ipsi custodes sufferre valent. labat ariete crebro ianua, et emoti procumbunt cardine postes.
 fit via vi : rumpunt aditus, primosque trucidant inmissi Danaï, et late loca milite complent. 495
*non sic, aggeribus ruptis cum spumens amnis exiit, oppositasque evicit gurgite moles, fertur in arva furens cumulo, camposque per omnes cum stabulis armenta trahit. vidi ipse furentem caede Neoptolemum, geminosque in limine Atridas : 500
 vidi Hecubam centumque nurus, Priamumque per aras sanguine foedantem quos ipse sacraverat ignes.
 quinquaginta illi thalami, spes tanta nepotum, barbarico postes auro spoliisque superbi, procubuerunt : tenent Danaï, qua deficit ignis. 505*

Death of Priam.

forsitan et, Priami fuerint quæ fata, requiras.
 urbis uti captae casum convulsaque vidit limina tectorum, et medium in penetralibus hostem, arma diu senior desueta trementibus aevo circumdat nequiquam umeris, et inutile ferrum 510

 cingitur, ac densos fertur moriturus in hostes.
 aedibus in mediis nudoque sub aetheris axe ingens ara fuit iuxtaque veterrima laurus, incumbens arae atque umbra complexa penates.
 hic Hecuba et natae nequiquam altaria circum, 515
praecipites atra ceu tempestate columbae, condensae et divom amplexae simulacra sedebant.
 ipsum autem sumptis Priamum iuvenalibus armis ut vidit, 'quae mens tam dira, miserrime coniunx, inpulit his cingit̃ telis? aut quo ruis?' inquit. 520
 'non tali auxilio, nec defensoribus istis tempus eget; non, si ipse meus nunc adforet Hector.
 huc tandem concede; haec ara tuebitur omnes, aut moriere simul.' sic ore effata recepit ad sese, et sacra longaevum in sede locavit. 525
 ecce autem elapsus Pyrrhi de caede Polites, unus natorum Priami, per tela, per hostes porticibus longis fugit, et vacua atria lustrat saucius. illum ardens infesto vulnere Pyrrhus insequitur, iam iamque manu tenet et premit hasta. 530
 ut tandem ante oculos evasit et ora parentum, concidit, ac multo vitam cum sanguine fudit.
 hic Priamus, quamquam in media iam morte tenetur,
 non tamen abstinuit, nec voci iraeque pepercit.
 'at tibi pro scelere,' exclamat, 'pro talibus ausis, 535 di, si qua est caelo pietas, quae talia curet, persolvant grates dignas, et praemia reddant debita, qui nati coram me cernere letum fecisti, et patrios foedasti funere vultus.
 at non ille, satum quo te mentiris, Achilles 540

SIR FREDK LEIGHTON

talis in hoste fuit Priamo ; sed iura fidemque supplicis erubuit, corpusque exsanguē sepulcro reddidit Hectoreum, meque in mea regna remisit.
 sic fatus senior, telumque inbelle sine ictu coniecit, rauco quod protinus aere repulsum, 545 et summo clipei nequiquam umbone pependit.
 cui Pyrrhus: 'referes ergo haec, et nuntius ibis Pelidae genitori : illi mea tristia facta degeneremque Neoptolemum narrare memento.
 nunc morere.' hoc dicens, altaria ad ipsa trementem 550 traxit et in multo lapsantem sanguine nati, implicuitque comam laeva, dextraque coruscum extulit ac lateri capulo tenus abdidit ensem.
 haec finis Priami fatorum ; hic exitus illum
 sorte tulit, Troiam incensam et prolapsa videntem 555 Pergama, tot quondam populis terrisque superbum regnatorem Asiae. iacet ingens litore truncus, avulsumque umeris caput, et sine nomine corpus.

Turning sadly away, Aeneas espies Helen, and in rage is about to slay her,

at me tum primum saevus circumstetit horror.
 obstipui ; subiit cari genitoris imago, 560
 ut regem aequaeuum crudeli vulnere vidi
 vitam exhalantem ; subiit deserta Creusa, et direpta domus, et parvi casus Iuli.
 respicio, et quae sit me circum copia lustro.
 deseruere omnes defessi, et corpora saltu 565
 ad terram misere aut ignibus aegra dedere.
 iamque adeo super unus eram, cum limina Vestae
 servantem et tacitam secreta in sede latentem Tyndarida aspicio ; dant clara incendia lucem erranti passimque oculos per cuncta ferenti. 570

 illa sibi infestos eversa ob Pergama Teucros, et poenas Danaum et deserti coniugis iras praemetuens, Troiae et patriae communis Erinys, abdiderat sese, atque aris invisa sedebat.
 exarsere ignes animo ; subit ira cadentem * 575
 ulcisci patriam, et sceleratas sumere poenas :
 scilicet haec Spartam incolumis patriasque Mycenae aspiciet, partoque ibit regina triumpho ?
 coniugiumque domumque patres natosque videbit, Iliadum turba et Phrygiis comitata ministris ? 580 occiderit ferro Priamus ? Troia arserit igni ?
 Dardanum toties sudarit sanguine litus ?
 non ita. namque, etsi nullum memorabile nomen feminea in poena est nec habet victoria laudem, extinxisse nefas tamen et sumpsisse merentes 585
 laudabor poenas, animumque explesse iuvabit ultricis flammae, et cineres satiasse meorum.

when he is checked by Venus, who reveals to him the fated destruction of the city and urges him to rescue his family.

talia iactabam, et furiata mente ferebar, cum mihi se, non ante oculis tam clara, videndam obtulit, et pura per noctem in luce refulsit 590
 alma parens, confessa deam, qualisque videri caelicolis et quanta solet ; dextraque prehensum continuit, roseoque haec insuper addidit ore :
 ‘ nate, quis indomitas tantus dolor excitat iras ?
 quid furis ? aut quonam nostri tibi cura recessit ? 595
 non prius aspicies, ubi fessum aetate parentem liqueris Anchisen ? superet coniunxne Creusa, Ascaniusque puer ? quos omnes undique Graiae circum errant acies, et, ni mea cura resistat, iam flammae tulerint inimicus et hauserit ensis. 600

non tibi Tyndaridis facies invisâ Lacænae, culpatusve Paris, divom inclementia, divom,
has evertit opes, sternitque a culmine Troiam.
aspice—namque omnem, quæ nunc obducta tuenti mortales hebetat visus tibi et umida circum 605 caligat, nubem eripiam : tu ne qua parentis iussa time, neu praeceptis parere recusa—hic, ubi disiectas moles avulsaque saxis saxa vides, mixtoque undantem pulvere fumum, Neptunus muros magnoque emota tridenti 610
fundamenta quatit, totamque a sedibus urbem eruit. hic Iuno Scaëas saevissima portas prima tenet, sociumque furens a navibus agmen ferro accincta vocat.
iam summas arces Tritonia, respice, Pallas 615
insedit, limbo effulgens et Gorgone saeva.
ipse Pater Danaïs animos viresque secundas sufficit ; ipse deos in Dardana suscitât arma.
eripe, nate, fugam, finemque inpone labori.
nusquam abero, et tutum patrio te limine sistam.' 620
dixerat ; et spissis noctis se condidit umbris.
adparent diræ facies, inimicaque Troiæ
numina magna deum.

Despair of Aeneas.

tum vero omne mihi visum considerare in ignes Ilium, et ex imo verti Neptunia Troia ; 625
ac veluti summis antiquam in montibus ornum cum ferro accisam crebrisque bipennibus instant eruerè agricolæ certatim ; illa usque minatur *et tremefacta comam concusso vertice nutat, vulneribus donec paulatim evicta supremum

congemuit traxitque iugis avulsa ruinam.* 630

Passing to his home, Aeneas in vain endeavours to induce his father to leave.

descendo, ac ducente deo flammam inter et hostes expedior ; dant tela locum, flammaeque recedunt.

atque ubi iam patriae perventum ad limina sedis antiquasque domos, genitor, quem tollere in altos 635
optabam primum montes primumque petebam, abnegat excisa vitam producere Troia, exsiliumque pati. ' vos o, quibus integer aevi sanguis,' ait, ' solidaeque suo stant robore vires, vos agitate fugam. 640

me si caelicolae voluissent ducere vitam, has mihi servassent sedes. satis una superque vidimus excidia, et captae superavimus urbi.
sic o sic positum adfati discedite corpus.
ipse manu mortem inveniam : miserebitur hostis, 645
exuviasque petet. facilis iactura sepulcri.
iam pridem invisus divis et inutilis annos demoror, ex quo me divom pater atque hominum rex fulminis adflavit ventis, et contigit igni.'

talia perstabat memorans, fixusque manebat. 650
nos contra effusi lacrimis, coniunxque Creusa Ascaniusque omnisque domus ne vertere secum cuncta pater fatoque urgenti incumbere vellet.
abnegat, inceptoque et sedibus haeret in isdem.

*In desperation, Aeneas resolves to rush to his death, but

rursus in arma feror, mortemque miserrimus opto. 655 nam quod consilium aut quae iam fortuna dabatur ?

'mene efferre pedem, genitor, te posse relicto sperasti? tantumque nefas patrio excidit ore?
 si nihil ex tanta superis placet urbe relinqui, et sedet hoc animo, perituraeque addere Troiae 660 teque tuosque iuvat, patet isti ianua leto, iamque aderit multo Priami de sanguine Pyrrhus, natum ante ora patris, patrem qui obtruncat ad aras.
 hoc erat, alma parens, quod me per tela, per ignes eripis, ut mediis hostem in penetralibus, utque 665 Ascanium patremque meum iuxtaque Creusam alterum in alterius mactatos sanguine cernam?
 arma, viri, ferte arma: vocat lux ultima victos.
 reddite me Danais; sinite instaurata revisam proelia. numquam omnes hodie moriemur inulti.' 670

hinc ferro accingor rursus, clipeoque sinistram insertabam aptans, meque extra tecta ferebam.
 ecce autem complexa pedes in limine coniunx
 haerebat, parvumque patri tendebat Iulum;
 'si periturus abis, et nos rape in omnia tecum; 675 sin aliquam expertus sumptis spem ponis in armis, hanc primum tutare domum. cui parvus Iulus,
 cui pater, et coniunx quondam tua dicta relinquer?'

Anchises' obstinacy overcome by an omen.

talia vociferans gemitu tectum omne replebat;
 cum subitum dictuque oritur mirabile monstrum. 680
 namque manus inter maestorumque ora parentum ecce levis summo de vertice visus Iuli fundere lumen apex, tactuque innoxia molles lambere flamma comas, et circum tempora pasci.
 nos pavidi trepidare metu, crinemque flagrantem 685
 excutere, et sanctos restinguere fontibus ignes.

at pater Anchises oculos ad sidera laetus extulit, et caelo palmas cum voce tetendit :
 'Iuppiter omnipotens, precibus si flecteris ullis, aspice nos—hoc tantum—et, si pietate meremur, 690
 da deinde auxilium, pater, atque haec omina firma.'

vix ea fatus erat senior, subitoque fragore intonuit laevum, et de caelo lapsa per umbras stella facem ducens multa cum luce cucurrit.
 illam, summa super labentem culmina tecti, 695
 cernimus Idaea claram se condere silva, signantemque vias ; tum longo limite sulcus
 dat lucem, et late circum loca sulfure fumant.
 hic vero victus genitor se tollit ad auras, adfaturque deos, et sanctum sidus adorat. 700
 'iam iam nulla mora est ; sequor, et qua ducitis, adsum,
 di patrii ; servate domum, servate nepotem ;
 vestrum hoc augurium, vestroque in numine Troia est.
 cedo equidem, nec, nate, tibi comes ire recuso.'

dixerat ille ; et iam per moenia clarior ignis 705
 auditur, propiusque aestus incendia volvunt.
 ergo age, care pater, cervici inponere nostrae ;
 ipse subibo umeris, nec me labor iste gravabit ;
 quo res cumque cadent, unum et commune periculum, una salus ambobus erit. mihi parvus Iulus 710 sit comes, et longe servet vestigia coniunx.
 vos, famuli, quae dicam, animis advertite vestris.
 est urbe egressis tumulus templumque vetustum desertae Cereris, iuxtaque antiqua cupressus,

Flight of Aeneas.

religione patrum multos servata per annos : 715
 hanc ex diverso sedem veniemus in unam.
 tu, genitor, cape sacra manu patriosque penates :
 me, bello e tanto digressum et caede recenti, attrectare nefas, donec me flumine vivo abluero.' 720
 haec fatus, latos umeros subiectaque colla veste super fulvique insternor pelle leonis ;
 succedoque oneri. dextrae se parvus Iulus
 implicuit, sequiturque patrem non passibus aequis :
 pone subit coniunx.

LOSS OF CREUSA.

*Hurrying along in terror, Aeneas is by a sudden alarm
separated from his wife.*

ferimur per opaca locorum ; 725 et me, quem dudum non ulla iniecta movebant tela, neque adverso glomerati ex agmine Graii, nunc omnes terrent aurae, sonus excitat omnis suspensum et pariter comitique onerique timentem.
 iamque propinquabam portis, omnemque videbar 730
 evasisse viam, subito cum creber ad aures visus adesse pedum sonitus, genitorque per umbram prospiciens, 'nate,' exclamat, 'fuge, nate ; propinquant :
 ardentes clipeos atque aera micantia cerno.'
 hic mihi nescio quod trepido male numen amicum 735
 confusam eripuit mentem. namque avia cursu dum sequor, et nota excedo regione viarum, heu ! misero coniunx fatone erepta Creusa substitit, erravitne via, seu lassa resedit ?
 incertum ; nec post oculis est reddita nostris. 740
 nec prius amissam respexi, animumve reflexi, quam tumulum antiquae Cereris sedemque sacratam venimus : hic demum collectis omnibus una defuit, et comites natumque virumque fefellit.

Leaving his father and son outside the city, he hastens back in search of Creusa.

quem non incusavi amens hominumque deorumque? 745 aut quid in eversa vidi crudelius urbe?
Ascanium Anchisenque patrem Teucrosque Penates commendo sociis, et curva valle recondo ;
ipse urbem repeto, et cingor fulgentibus armis.
stat casus renovare omnes, omnemque reverti 750 per Troiam, et rursus caput obiectare periclis.

principio muros obscuraque limina portae, qua gressum extuleram, repeto ; et vestigia retro observata sequor per noctem et lumine lustro.
horror ubique animo, simul ipsa silentia terrent. 755
inde domum, si forte pedem, si forte, tulisset, me refero. inruerant Danaï, et tectum omne tenebant.
ilicet ignis edax summa ad fastigia vento volvitur ; exsuperant flammae ; furit aestus ad auras.
procedo, et Priami sedes arcemque reviso. 760
et iam porticibus vacuis Iunonis asylo

The shade of Creusa appears to Aeneas and, consoling him for her loss, predicts his glorious future.

quaerenti et tectis urbis sine fine furenti

NOTES ON VERGIL'S AENEID.

BOOK II.

N.B.—In the grammatical references F. signifies First Latin Book ; P., Primary Latin Book. In the case of the former, the numbers refer to pages ; of the latter, to the sections of Part III.

1—conticuere—tenebant : “all were hushed and were fixing their gaze in close attention.” The perfect (conticuere) describes a single completed act, while the imperfect (tenebant) expresses duration.—ora may be the object of tenebant, or accusative of specification after intenti : F. 98, 3 : P. 83 (e) ii ; cp. Aen. 6, 156, defixus lumina. Or, with Henry, ora tenebant to be interpreted as a “modified repetition” of conticuere, i.e., “held their utterance,” “kept silent,” as opposed to solvere ora, movere ora, etc. Ora would then = “mouth” figuratively, i.e., “speech.” Cp. ora tenebit, Ovid, Met. 9, 513, and Gk. ἔχε στόμα = σίγα, Eurip. Suppl. 513. This habit of modified repetition in Vergil is well known. Conticuere ; con, intensive : the silence was deep and perfect.

3—infandum : note the emphasis gained by position : “too grievous to tell is the woe thou bid’st me recall.”—inbeo, like κελεύω in Greek, is used for both requests and commands.

4—ut eruerint : indirect question depending on the verb of telling implied in renovare dolorem since this is equivalent to renovare dolorem narrando : “how the Greeks utterly destroyed the power of Troy and her woeful realm” : F. 178, 1 ; P. 99 (d).—lamentabile ; adjs. in -bilis are usually passive as here. With the sentiment : cp. Tennyson, Locksley Hall—

This is truth the poet sings

That a sorrow’s crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.

5—quaeque—fui : “and the very sad sights I myself beheld and whereof I have formed a great part” ; both of these clauses are explanatory of dolorem. The narrative of Aeneas is largely personal and deals with the capture of Troy only ; quaeque is epexegetic and limitative.

6—talia fādo : “in telling such a tale,” or “while such a tale is told,” in a secondary way.

7—Myrmidonum—Dolopum—Ulixi : Aeneas purposely mentions the most hard-hearted soldiers of the Grecian host. The Myrmidones and Dolopes were the soldiers from Phthia in Thessaly under the command of Achilles and his son Neoptolemus, while Ulixes, “the williest of men,” is taken as a stock example of Greek perfidy.—duri, “hardy” : cp. the Homeric πολυτάς—Ulixi, from the form Ulixeus (cp. Hor. Od. 1, 6, 7), gen. Ulixei and then contracted into Ulixi ; so also Achilles, gen. Achillei, Achilli. Note the difference between -ve disjoining members of the same class and aut disjoining different classes.

8—temperet a lacrimis : “could refrain from tears” : rhetorical question ; F. 139 (a) ; P. 98 (g). What answer is implied in a rhetorical question ?—caelo praecepitat : “is speeding down the slope of heaven ;” it is now past midnight. Night was said by the Romans to rise and set as the sun ; v. 250.—caelo : F. 309, 37 ; P. 85 (k), i.

9—suadentque—somnos : bring out the alliteration in the original by translating, “and the setting stars invite us to slumber.”

10—si, scil., est vobis : F. 120, 3 ; P. 82 (f), i.

11—supremum—laborem : “to hear Troy’s last agony ;” so also we have the euphemistic expressions dies supremus, “the day of death ;” ὁδὸς ἰστέτη, “the last journey.”

12—quamquam—refugit : “though my soul shudders at the recollection and has ever shrunk back from it in sorrow, I will begin.” Distinguish between the construction of quamquam and quamvis : F. 196 ; P. 99 (i). Note the difference in the tense of horret and refugit ; the former describes the present feelings of Aeneas and the latter an instantaneous act in the past whenever the request was made.—luctu, ablative of cause.

13—incipiam : usually translated “I will begin,” but possibly “I will undertake, or attempt :” cp. Tibull 4, 1, 1, and Horace Sat. 1, 1, 92.

14—Danaum = Danaorum : so also Teucrum = Teucrorum ; Achivum = Achivorum ; virum = virorum ; divum = divorum. — tot — annis :

"when so many years were now slipping past": abl. absol. Troy was taken in the tenth year of the siege.

15—instar montis: "as huge as a mountain." In Vergil instar is always accompanied by a genitive, except in Aen. 6, 865, quantum instar in ipso, "what a model in himself:" cp. Aen. 3, 637; 7, 707. It is an indeclinable noun used in the nom. and acc.; generally derived from root STA, "to set up," hence, "something set up," therefore "an image."—divina—arte. Pallas favored the Greeks as Juno did the Trojans. The former was also the patroness of all kinds of art, hence by her aid the horse was built: Hom. Od. 8, 493; ἵππον τὸν Ἑπειὸς ἐποίησεν σὺν Ἀθῆνῃ. See also Il. 15, 70.

16—secta abiete: "with interlacing planks of fir they form the sides."—abiete: abl. of instrument. In scanning this verse i consonantal in abiete, i.e. it has to be pronounced abyete and therefore the ā is long; so also in 442, pārĭtĭbas=pāryĕtĭbus; 492, ārĭtĕ=āryĕtĕ.—intexunt: a metaphor taken from weaving; the planks of the sides are placed horizontally across the ribs of the horse just as the horizontal threads of the woof are placed across the vertical threads of the warp. Abiete: note the variation in v. 112: trabibus acernis.

17—votum scil. esse: "they pretend that it is a votive offering for their return." Distinguish simulare, "to pretend a thing to be what it is not;" dissimulare, "to conceal what a thing is."

18—huc includunt: "they shut up in it;" note huc is used as motion is implied in includunt.—delecta virum corpora=delectos viros (by metonymy).—sortiti; literally, "having selected by lot;" simply, "having selected."

19—lateri caeco: we should have expected in latus caecum. Vergil is fond of using a dative of the recipient for the accusative with ad or in: cp. v. 36, pelago=in pelagus; v. 47, urbi=in urbem; v. 85, neci=ad necem.

20—penitusque cavernas—complent, a mere variation of the preceding clause. Point out a possible hendiadys here.

21—in conspectu—scil. Troiae: Tenedos was four miles from the shore of the Troad.

22—dives opum: "rich of store:" F. 61, 3; P. 81 (f) i. Compare dives and decline opum: F. 57 and 279; P. 12 and 54 (a).—dum manebant: F. 216, 3; P. 99 (f).

- 23—male fida: literally, "ill-faithful," i.e., "treacherous." With words of evil meaning male intensifies their force; with words of good meaning it contradicts it.
- 24—huc: join this with profecti: "hither they proceed and conceal themselves on the deserted shore."—deserto shows a change in the fortunes of Tenedos.
- 25—rati scil. sumus, from reor: see note v. 2.—vento, abl. of instrument: "with a favoring breeze." Mycenas=in Graeciam: the royal city of Agamemnon, the leader of the Greeks is put for the whole country.
- 26—Note the slow and measured spondees well describe the lifting of the heavy weight of grief from the minds of the Trojans.—longo—luctu: "the Trojan land puts her long grief away."—luctu, ablative of separation.—with Teucris supply terra.
- 27—panduntur—portae: a sign of peace: cp. Hor. Od. 3, 5, 25; portasque non clausas; Ars. Poetica, 199, apertis otia portis.—iuvat scil. vos.—Dorica=Graeca: the Dorians were one of the leading tribes in the war of Troy; here put for the whole nation.
- 29—hic—solebant: the remarks of the Trojans are here quoted.—tendebat scil. vela, "used to spread his tent."
- 30—pars stupef—mirantur: stupeo is the case of an intransitive verb used transitively. Note the change in the number; the subject in the one case is regarded as a unit, in the other case the individuals are in the mind of the poet.—Minervae: objective genitive after donum, "gift to Minerva."—Innuptae: "virgin," literally, "unwedded:" cp. the epithet παρθένος, "a maiden," hence her temple at Athens was called Parthenon.
- 32—primusque—Thymoetes: "and Thymoetes was the first that advised that it (i.e. the horse) be drawn within our walls and set in the citadel."—duci, scil. equum.—arce. = in arce; see note on v. 19. Poetry, both ancient and modern, often omits prepositions. The Pergama was the citadel of Troy. Note that Vergil uses an infinitive for ut with the subjunctive after impello, v. 55, 520; hortor, v. 74; hortor, v. 627.
- 34—sive—ferebant: "whether in guile or whether the doom of Troy was bringing on this end." Distinguish nunc, "the present moment," "now," Gk. νῦν; iam, including a period of the past up to the present and including it, "all this time:" Gk. ἤδη or δή.—ferebant; often fero is used with words such as ita, sic, without an object denoting a tendency of events: cp. Cic. Att. 2, 25, 2, ut opinio et spes et coniectura nostra fert, "according to our opinion, hope and belief."

- 35—quorum—menti, scil. erat: "whose mind had better counsel:" F. 120, 3; P. 82 (f), i.
- 36—aut—latebras: Capys advises three courses: (1) to hurl the horse headlong into the sea; (2) to burn it; (3) to examine it. The first two involve the destruction of the horse, and hence are connected by que; the main alternative is marked by aut between courses (1) and (2) on the one hand and (3) on the other. See note on -ve and aut; v. 7—pelago=in pelagus: see note on lateri caeco, v. 19.
- 39—scinditur—vulgus: the crowd are divided in opinion as to whether they should (a) draw the horse within the walls, or (b) destroy it (marked by (1) and (2)), or explore "the hidden caverns" (marked by (3)), some adopting the advice of Thymoetes (a), others that of Capys (b).
- 40—magnā—catervā: "followed by a great throng:" abl. abs.
- 41—ardens: "eagerly."—arce: Pergama, or the citadel of Troy which overlooked the shore. Laocoon was the son of Priam and Hecuba and priest of Apollo [see proper names].
- 42—et procul, scil. exclamat: the verb of saying is often omitted: cp. v. 287, ille nihil, scil. respondet, so also v. 547, cui Pyrrhus.
- 44—carere dolis: "are free from wiles:" (F. 158, 1; P. 85 (h)).—Danaum=Danaorum: see note v. 14.—sic Ulixes: "is such your knowledge of Ulysses?" Ulysses (as we have said before, see note v. 7) is taken throughout the Aeneid as a type of Greek cunning: cp. the Homeric epithets πολύμητις, πολύτροπος, πολυμήχανος.
- 45—aut—Achivi: "either the Greeks are hid, caged in this wood."—hoc ligno=in hoc ligno: see note v. 32. As Gladstone in his Iuventus Mundi points out, the three great appellatives of the Greeks were Δαναοί (Latin, Danai), Ἀργεῖοι (Argivi) and Ἀχαιοί (Achivi), the general terms Ἕλληνες in Greek, and Graeci in Latin, were not yet applied to the whole race. Vergil following Homer calls the Greeks Achivi, Danai or Argivi, never Graeci, although he uses the adjective Graius, originally applied to a tribe of Epirus and probably after the time of Ennius applied by the Latin to the whole country.

47—inspectura: the horse is looked upon as an engine of war (machina) which would look down on the houses of the city as a turris in a siege.—urbi=in urbem.

49—et=etiam. The gifts of foes were proverbially fatal: cp. Soph. Ajax, 664:

ἀλλ' ἐστ' ἀληθὴς ἡ βροτῶν παροιμία ἐχθρῶν ἄδωρα δῶρα κοῖν' ὀνίσσιμα.

cp. Psalms xxvi, 101: “In whose hands is mischief and their right hand is full of bribes.”

50—validis—viribus: ablative of manner; join with contorsit: “with might and main.” Of the five terms used by Vergil to express the casting of a spear, viz., iacio, conicio, torqueo, intorqueo and contorqueo, the last is the strongest; “with all the collected strength of a powerfully strong man.”

51—in—akum; “against the flank and against the belly of the monster rounded with jointed timbers.”—Note the emphasis gained by the repetition of the preposition in.—compagibus: ablative of manner.—Note also that -que is added for explanation.

52—illa, scil. hasta.—uteroque recusso: “by the reverberation of the womb:” literally “the womb re-echoing.”

53—cavae: perhaps to be taken predicatively, “sounded hollow,” or the structure may be the same as that of v. 38. Note the repetition of the same sound in cavae cavernae. In in insonnere is intensive.

54—laeva: the word laevus was originally derived from the language of the Augurs and meant primarily unpropitious as all omens, according to the Greeks appearing on the left were unpropitious, though the opposite of this was the case with the Romans. Both Greeks and Romans regarded the east as the lucky quarter and the west unlucky, but the Greek in taking omens looked north and hence ἀριστερός “the left hand” was with them unlucky and δεξιός “on the right” was lucky. The secondary meaning was “awkward” from the awkwardness of the left hand: cf. Fr. gauche, gaucherie. Translate: “if the fates of the gods had not been adverse to us, if our mind had not been blinded:" note the zeugma in laeva.—deum=deorum. Conington says that with fata only fuissent should be supplied: "had fate so willed it, had our mind been wise:" taking non laeva closely together.

55—impulerat=impulisset: "he had surely moved us to mangle with the sword the hiding places of the Greeks." The indicative is more vivid and picturesque than the subjunctive in the apodosis of a conditional sentence since thus more reality and force are given to what would have happened.

56—We have in this line both staret—maneret and stares—maneres as well as staret—maneres (Ribbeck). Which of these is the most lively? What figure of speech? The imperf. subj. means "would now be standing—would now be remaining."—manus—revinctum: "with hands tied behind his back."—manus: acc. of specification (F. 88, 3; P. 83 (e) ii). This is a frequent construction in Vergil: cp. intenti ora (v. 1); oculos suffecti (v. 210); perfusus vittas (v. 221); medium amplexi (v. 217); traiectus lora (v. 273); exuvias indutus (v. 273).

59—qui-morti: "who, to compass this very thing, (namely) to open Troy to the Greeks, had designedly put himself in their way as they approached him; confident of speech (was he) and prepared for either issue, either to work out his craft or to submit to certain death."—qui, join with obtulerat.—qui introduces a clause explanatory of the clause preceding.—animi is genitive of respect or locative.—morti: (F. 120, 1; P. 82 (e) ii).—Troiamque aperiret Achivis: explanatory of hoc ipsum.

64—certantque—capto: "and they vie with each other in jeering at the prisoner."—certare takes the infinitive illudere after it for the more common ut illudent: (F. 181, 3); (P. 99, a, 2): so also we have impulerat fodare (v. 55); ardemus scitari (v. 64); adgressi avellere (v. 165); tendit divellere (v. 220); glomerare ardent (v. 455); impulit cingi (v. 520). Note the change from the singular ruit to plural certant: see note on line 30.

65—Vergil assents to Dido's request: Dic—insidias, inquit, Danaum; Aen. I, 753.

66—omnes, scil. Danaos: "from the charge against one, learn to know all." Vergil died before he finished the Aeneid. According to the grammarian, Donatus, the poet on his deathbed desired that the poem should be burned, but ultimately left it in the hands of Varius and Tucca, his literary testators to edit: Ea conditione ne quid adderent quod a se editum non esset, et versus etiam imperfectos, si qui erant, relinquerent. These imperfect verses (hemistichs) are in all 58. In this book they are common: vs. 234, 346, 468, 614, 720, 767.

- 67—namque, like Greek γάρ, introducing a narrative may be altogether omitted in an English translation.—ut, “as,” always with the indicative in this sense.—turbatus, “confused,” showing a want of self-possession.—in conspectu, “in the centre of the gazing throng.”
- 68—circumspexit: the heavy spondees bring out well the slow and measured gaze with which Sinon scanned his audience. In spondaic lines the last word is usually a quadri-syllable in Vergil, but there are not a few exceptions to the rule.
- 69—nunc=Greek νῦν, “at the present moment.”
- 70—iam—denique: “now at last,” “after all.”
- 71—cui—poscunt: “who have neither any place among the Greeks and likewise the Trojans with hostile feelings (infensi) clamor for the forfeit of my life (literally, my life with my blood.”—cui, scil. est: (F. 120, 3; P. 82 (f), i).—poenas cum sanguine=poenas et sanguinem.—poena: cp. ποινά, the wer-geld or money paid in atonement for a crime committed: from root PU, “to purify:” cp. purus, punio.
- 73—quo—impetus: “by this lamentation our feelings were altered and every thought of violence was suppressed.”—conversi, scil. sunt; so also compressus, scil. est.
- 74—hortamur fari: see note on v. 64.—quo sanguine cretus, scil. sit: “from what blood he is sprung:” dependent question (F. 176; P. 99 (b) ); so also ferat, sit. The words quo—capto in oblique narration answering to quo sanguine cretus sis, quidve feras, memora, quae sit fiducia (tibi) capto in direct narration.—capto, F. 120, 3; P. 82 (f), i.
- 77—fuert quodcumque: “whatever may betide,” literally, “whatever shall have come of it:” it is better to take fuert as the future perfect indicative, i.e., “I shall confess whatever shall (as the result of my confession) have happened.”
- 78—me, scil. esse.
- 79—hoc primum, scil. jatebor.—nec—finget: “nor, if fortune hath made Sinon unhappy, shall she in malice make him a cheat and a liar.”

- 80—vanum, one who asserts what is not the fact, from ignorance, folly, or mistake ; mendacem, one who does so from a desire to deceive.
- 81—fando—lugent : “if, perchance, by hearsay, any name of Palamedes, a descendant of Belus, hath at all reached your ears, and his glory of famous renown, whom on false information the Pelasgi sent down to death, though he was innocent, on wicked evidence because he forbade the war ; now they bewail him bereft of light.”—Bēlides here, for the more common Bēlides. Considerable latitude in quantity is allowed in the case of proper names.—incluta, gloria, from same root KLU, “to hear,” gloria=clu-oria : cp. also laus=clauds ; cf. cliens. Eng. loud=A.S. hlūd.—proditione=crimine.—Note the emphasis gained by the repeated in—insontem infando indicio.—neci=ad necem : cp. Iliad I, 3, ψυχάς Ἴδιδι προΐαψεν.—cassum : perf. part. of careo.—cassum lumine, euphemism for mortuum : cp. Homeric : τὸν δὲ σκότος ὅσσε κάλυψεν : Il. 6, 11 ; lumine : F. 309, 17 ; P. 85 (h).
- 83—falsa sub proditione : different interpretations of this are found : (1) “sub falso crimine proditionis,” Servius—“Under false charge of treason.” (2) “At a time when there was a false alarm of treason in the camp.” Henry : cf. sub nocte, sub somno, etc.
- 84—quia—vetabat. Note the force of the Indic : not because they said he was forbidding (quia vetaret), but because he (actually) was forbidding.” F. 148, 2 ; P. 99 (g). Notice here the supreme skill with which Sinon excites the sympathy of the Trojans.
- 86—illi—annis : “as his comrade and nearly related in blood, my father, a poor man, sent me hither to the war from my early years.” —illi : Note the emphatic position of this pronoun : in arma (1)=in bellum, (2) “to the profession of arms.”—primis ab annis : (1) initio belli, or, (2) “from the first years of my manhood=ab incunte aetate.”
- 88—dum gessimus : “while he stood unshaken in royalty and potent in counsels of the chiefs, we, too, won a name and honor :” dum, with indicative : F. 201 ; P. 99 (f.).—regno=in regno ; so consiliis=in consiliis : cp. the Homeric βουλή γερόντων.
- 90—pellacis : first occurs here in Latin : derived from per-lacio, “to allure” : said of one who allures another to crime. According to Festus : laci decipiendo inducit, lax etenim fraus est. Vergil had evidently in his mind the stock epithets that Homer applies to Ulysses πολύμητις, πολυμήχανος.

- 91—haud ignota loquor: with ignota scil. vobis or mihi. In the first case the meaning is: you know the story: in the second, I speak things not from mere hearsay.—superis—oris: “he left the upper regions,” i.e., “the world above.”—ora properly the coast line; then a dividing line of any kind. Here it means the line separating the world above from the world below: cf. Lucretius 1, 22, in luminis oras, “into the realms of light.”
- 92—adflictus—trahebam: “crushed I dragged on life in gloom and grief.”—adfligo, to dash to the earth.
- 93—et—amici: “and in my own heart (meum), I brooded in wrath over the misfortune of my guiltless friend.”—meum: alone by myself.—Observe the force of the imperfects trahebam, indignabar. F. 216, 3; P. 97 (b), and notice the change to the perfect (tacui) in the next line.
- 94—nec—movi: “nor in my madness did I hold my tongue, and I vowed, should chance ever bring it about, should ever I return to my native Argos, as a victor, that I should be his avenger, and by my words I aroused fierce enmity.”—demens, “downright mad;” cp. παράφρων; amens, “foolish;” cp. ἄφρων.—tulisset—remeassem: subjunctive of oblique narrative; his words would be: si quae fors unquam tulerit—remeavero.—Argos: from the form Argi, Argorum (masc. pl.); we also have Argos nom. and acc. neut. sing.—ultorem = me futurum esse ultorem.
- 96—verbis: “by my threats”: abl. of means: et is epexegetic.
- 97—hinc: “hence,” either from this time or from this cause.—prima mali labes: “the first slip towards destruction”: labes from lābor: English, slip.
- 98—hinc—arma: “from this time Ulysses always continued to alarm me by new charges, to scatter dark sayings amid the crowd, and, knowing my purpose, sought for means to attack me.”—Note the historical infinitives terrere, spargere, quaerere for imperfect indicatives: F. 216, 3, note 2; P. 101 (d).—vulgum: one of the few places where vulgus is masculine: F. 275; P. 48 (b).—quaerere conscius arma: others take this to mean, “to seek allies as a conspirator.”
- 100—hic—ministro: “and, indeed, he did not rest till by the aid of Calchas.” Note the artful way in which Sinon breaks off when he is just on the point of arousing the curiosity of his audience and compare the speech of Marc Antony over the body of Caesar in Shakespeare’s Julius Caesar, Act 3, Scene 2.—Calchante ministro:

ablative absolute.—This abrupt method of breaking off a discourse is called by the grammarians aposiopesis.

101—sed—revolve? “but yet, why do I to no purpose unroll these bitter recollections?” Distinguish frustra said of the person; nequidquam said of the result of the act; e.g. suscipit frustra laborem, “he undertakes this labor without profit”: nequidquam auxilium implorat: “he begs in vain for help.”—revolve: metaphor is taken from a thread revolving on the spindle, or from turning over the pages of a scroll.

102—quidve—est: “or why do I delay, if you account all the Achaeans in one and the same class, and it is sufficient to be called this (name of Greek).—uno ordine=in uno ordine.—audio=appellor, like the Greek ἀκούω: cp. κακῶς ἀκούειν οὐ μέλει θανόντι μοι: Eurip. Alc. 726: Horace: Tu recte vivis si curas esse quod audis: Milton’s Paradise Lost, 3, 6.

Or hear’st thou rather, pure ethereal stream,
Whose fountain who shall tell?

103—iamdudum sumite poenas=sumite poenas iamdudum sumendas: “take the vengeance, you should have taken long ago.” With sumere poenas, cp. λαβεῖν δίκην: “to exact a penalty”; poenas dare, cp. δίδοναι δίκην, “to pay a penalty.”

104—hoc—velit: “this, the chief of Ithaca would wish:” the conditional clause si hoc faciat is understood: F. 139 (b) and 192, II (b); P. 98 (c).—Ithacus=dux Ithacus=Ulixes.—magno: “at a great price:” F. 150, I; P. 85 (i).

105—tum—causas: “then, indeed, we press on to ask and enquire the cause.”—tum vero; note the emphasis.

106—ignari—Pelasgae: “ignorant of wickedness so great and of Pelasgic craft.” For the genitive: F. 61, 3; P. 81, b (i).—Pelasgae: the Pelasgi were a Thessalian or Epirotic tribe, applied afterwards to the Greeks in Eurip. Or. 857 and often in Vergil. The word seems to come from the same root as πелλός, πολιώς, πελιός: Lat. palleo, pallidus, from their complexion.

107—ficto—pectore: “with false heart.”—F. 71, 3; P. 85 (e). Possibly pectore here = “emotion.”

108—saepe—saepe: note the repetition: “often the Danai desired to take their flight, leaving Troy behind, and to disband through weariness of the long war.” In prose the repetition of saepe—saepe would be expressed thus: "As often as the Danaï... so often a storm prevented them."—cupiere=cupierunt.—bello goes with fessi.

110—fecissentque utinam: explain fully the force of the mood and tense with utinam: F. 138, 4 (c); P. 98 (a) 2.

111—intercludit, scil. eos: "barred their way."—Auster: from uro, αῦω, parch; here the parching wind.—euntes: "just going." This wind would be adverse for those sailing from Troy to Greece.

112—praecipue—nimbi: "most of all when this horse already stood framed with beams of maple, storm clouds roared over all the sky." In v. 16 the planks are spoken of as of pine: in v. 86, as of oak.—trabibus: abl. means.—aethere; local ablative=in aethere.

113—staret=esset, Heyne, Forbiger; but surely the full force of staret is here more vivid and poetic.

114—scitantem. Another reading is scitatum, probably an incorrect one, for the supine rarely governs a case: cp. Livy 21, 6: legati a Saguntinis Romani—missi auxilium ad bellum orantes. The great oracle of Apollo was at Delphi; others were at Patara, Delos and other places.

115—adytis: "from the sanctuary:" cp. ἄδυτον (a not and dytai, to enter) properly the inner shrine containing the image of the god.

116—sanguine et virgine caesa: a hendiadys=sanguine virginis caesae, "with the blood of a maiden slain." The Greek fleet was detained by head winds at Aulis till Agamemnon consented to sacrifice his daughter Iphigenia to Diana.

117—cum primum—venistis: F. 203, 2; P. 99 (F.) v; so ut—venit, v. 119.

118—litanum: impersonal, "expiation must be made."

121—tremor—parent: the subjunctive in parent is the subjunctive of dependent question. The meaning is they shivered as they enquired of each other, "for whom fate prepares their doom."

122—magno tumultu: "with boisterous vehemence."

123—quae—flagitat: "demands what that heavenly intimation means:" F. 176; P. 99 (d).—flagitare implies violence and persistency.

124—iam caneant: "all the while many a one continued to warn me." It is best to take mihi as an ethical dative. Vergil dignifies the warnings of the Greeks with the verb caneant as if they were oracular, for oracles were always given in verse.

125—artificis: “the contriver,” i.e., Ulysses.

126—bis quinos: the distributive is regularly used with adverbs for the cardinal numeral.—tectus: either, “shut up in his tent” or “concealing his thoughts.”

128—Ithaci=ducis Ithaci=Ulixis: see v. 104.

129—composito: “by concert.”—rumpit vocem, “breaks silence:” literally “makes an utterance break forth:” cp. ῥηγνύναι φωνήν.

130—quae=tulere: “the ills each feared for himself they bore with patience, when turned to the destruction of one unhappy man.”—unius: here.—The whole sentence is extremely sarcastic. All men bear lightly the ills of others when such ills do not affect themselves. Others take conversa tulere=converterunt et tulerunt: “they turned and carried to very destruction.” With tulere: cp. ἔτλησαν: with root TLA, “bear;” cp. Scottish thole.

132—sacra parari: the sacra, “preparations for the sacrifice” are defined in the next line.—parari: historical infinitive: F. 216, 3, note 2; P. 101 (d).

133—salsae fruges: the coarse barley meal mixed with salt (mola salsa) was sprinkled on the head of the victim just before the sacrifice: cp. οὐλοχυστά.—vittae not merely the priest, but also the victims were crowned with garlands.

134—eripui=rupi: “I broke away, I confess it, from death; and I burst my bonds,”—lato: ablative of separation. Human victims were usually bound for sacrifice: cp. Genesis xxii, 9; Ovid. Eleg. ex Pont: 3.

135—limosoque lacu: “and in a miry marsh:” note the alliteration. Vergil may have had in his mind’s eye Marius, who took refuge in the marsh at Minturnae when he was trying to escape the soldiers of Sulla.—obscurus in ulva: “screened amid the sedge.”

136—delitui: from delitescere.—dum=dedissent: “till they might set their sails, if haply they should set them.”—dum=darent: for the mood F. 201, 4; P. 99 (f), iii. With darent vela, scil. ventis. The mood depends on the oratio obliqua. In direct discourse this would be: “I shall lie hid till they set sail (dum vela dent) if they haply shall have set sail (si forte dederint)”: the future perfect indicative of the direct narrative passes into the pluperfect subjunctive of the oblique: F. 207, 7; P. 107 (b).

137.—mihi=spes ulla, scil. est.

- 138—dulces natos : some find a difficulty here, for in v. 87 the children of Sinon must have been considerably advanced in years.
- 139—quos—repositos : “of them will they even haply claim vengeance as due (re-) for my flight.”—quos—poenas : for the two accusatives : F. 92 ; P. 83 (f).
- 140—et—piabunt : “and they will wash away this crime by this wretched death of mine.” Note the force of hanc. F. 119, 5 ; P. 92 (a).
- 141—quod—ferentis : “therefore, by the gods above, by the deities to whom the truth is known, I beseech thee ; by all the faith yet unsullied that is any where left among mortals ; pity woes so great, pity an undeserving sufferer.”—quod : often used in introducing adjurations : cp. Aen. 6, 363, quod te per caeli incundum lumen—oro.—per : the object of per is the whole clause, si qua—fides : Aen. 10, 903 : per si qua est victis venia hostibus oro : cp. Aen. 4, 317 ; 6, 459 ; 12, 56.—restet : the doubt in Sinon's mind of any pledge being too sacred for one to violate is expressed by the subjunctive. What would restet express ? F. 192, 1 ; P. 99 (h).—intemerata : in=Gk. ἀνὴρ (contracted ἀν), Eng. un ; and temerare, “to profane.”—laborum—miserere : distinguish in meaning and construction misereor and miseror : F. 146, 7 ; P. 81 (f) iii.
- 145—his—lacrimis : indirect object.—ultra (connected with ultra) : the word is applied to acts that go beyond what the circumstances require. Here the idea is, “we grant him not only his life but we also pity him unasked.”
- 146—viro : taken best as an ethical dative : others take it as the ablative of separation by an inversion of construction, the usual construction being virum—manicis atque artis levare vinculis : F. 138 ; P. 85 (h).
- 147—dictis : ablative of manner.
- 148—amissos—obliviscere Graios by prolepsis=amitte Graios et obliviscere : “let the Greeks go and forget them.” What is the usual construction with obliviscor : F. 146, 7 ; P. 81 (f) iii. The meaning is the Greeks are not to be regarded as your countrymen since their acts are hostile. Possibly amissos obliviscere Graios : “forget that the Greeks are lost,” esse being understood. F. 205 ; P. 101 (b).
- 149—noster : “one of us” : cf. alienus, “a foreigner.” A Roman general receiving a deserter addressed him with the words : quisquis es noster eris.—mihī—roganti : “and unfold the truth to my question.”

- 150—quo—statuere: “to what end have they built this huge and monstrous horse.”—immanis from in “not,” and root MA, “to measure”: hence immeasurable in size. Note the repeated questions well mark the impatience of Priam.—quis auctor? “who suggested it?”
- 151—quae religio? “what religious purpose did it imply?”: religio from prefix RED or RE: LIG, “bind”: the restraining feeling from a belief in the unseen universe.—machina: “engine”: from μηχανή, μηχανος connected with μέδομαι, μήτις, root MA, “to think.”
- 152—ille, i.e., Sinon.—dolis—Pelasga: “stored in the crafts of the Grecian wiles”: cf. Il. 4, 339: κακοῖσι δόλοισι κεκασμένε. Note the hendiadys in dolis et arte Pelasga: (abl. of means). For Pelasga see v. 83.
- 153—sustulit—palmas: “raised to the skies his hands freed from bonds.”—vinclis: ablative of separation.—palmas: with palma, cp. παλαμή “blade of an oar”: root PAL or PAD, “to spread”: cf. palor, pando. Note the treachery of Sinon.
- 154—ignes: “heavenly bodies.”
- 155—ensesque nefandi: “and ye accursed knives,” referring to the sacrificial knives.
- 156—hostia: from the obsolete hostio “to strike:” hostia dicta est ab eo quod est hostire ferire: Festus. Hence, the thing struck.
- 157—fas—iura: “it is right for me to break the allegiance I have sworn to the Greeks.” Distinguish fas=Gk. θεῖμς, established right by divine law: ius, human law. According to Servius sacratum ius=sacramentum, the ordinary oath of a Roman soldier and iusiurandum, the rights (iura) that that oath implies.
- 158—Note the beginning of successive lines by the same word fas (anaphora).—omnia—sub auras: “bring all things to light”: cp. ἀγειν ὑπ’ ἀγίας; Hor. Od. I, 18, 13: sub divum rapiam.
- 159—qua=quae, after si: F. 132, 2; P. 26: “whatever they keep secret.”
- 160—tu—rependam: “only do you abide by your promise, and do thou, O Troy, preserve faith with thy preserver, if I shall reveal the truth and shall make a large recompense.” With promissis manere, cp. stare iusiurando: the ablative is local or of means.
- 162—Danaum=Danaorum.—coepti—belli: “confidence in undertaking the war,” equivalent to fiduciā quā bellum inceperunt, others take it to be the genitive of reference or a causal genitive.

163—Palladis—stetit: “by Pallas’ aid ever stood firm.”—Note the emphatic position of Palladis.—sto is often used in the sense of “to remain firm,” “to stand secure”: cp. Verg. Georg. 4, 208: stat Fortuna domus: Hor. Od. 3, 3, 42: stet Capitolium.—auxiliis is ablative of instrument.

164—sed enim: “but, indeed, ever since the wicked son of Tydeus and Ulysses, the contriver of crimes, made bold to tear the fated Palladium from her sanctuary and cut down the sentries on the towered height.”—impius, on account of Diomedes wounding Venus (Homer Il. 5, 330-347).—scelerum inventor: see note on v. 90.—ex quo, scil. tempore: we have a similar omission in Gk. ἐξ οὗ, scil. χρόνον. —sed enim = ἀλλὰ γάρ: there is always an ellipsis after these words which may in this case be supplied thus: “but (a change came) for, etc.”—fatale: the preservation of Troy was linked by fate (fatalis) with the preservation of the Palladium or image of Pallas; cp. M. Arnold: “Backward and forward rolled the waves of fight round Troy; but while this stood Troy could not fall.”—caesis custodibus, abl. abs.—summa arx: ἀκρόπολις or ἀκρὴ πόλις.

167—corripuere—mens: “(ever since) they seized the holy image and dared with bloody hands to touch the maiden chaplets of the goddess, from that time the hope of the Greeks ebbd and slid away backwards, their strength was broken, the mind of the goddess estranged.”—virgineas vittas: the fillet was worn by both matrons and maids, which in some respects differed: cf. the “snood” worn by maidens and the “coif” or “curch” worn by the married women among the Scottish women of the former days. Scott’s Heart of Midlothian, chap. xxii: “Tresses of long, fair hair, which . . . Effie dared no longer confine with the snood or riband, which implied purity of maiden fame.” So also Una in Spencer’s Fairie Queen, I, 3, 4—

ex illo, scil. tempore.—fluere ac referri, historical infinitive = fluxit ac relata est: a metaphor from the ebb and flow of the tide. The final monosyllable as well as the rhythm describes the abrupt and slow motion of the tide.

171—nec—monstris: “and by no uncertain tokens did the Tritonian goddess give signs thereof.” Tritonia scil. dea: derived probably from τρεῖς “third”; γίγνομαι “to be born”: therefore “born on the third of the month,” hence called τριτόμηνος, or from the three phases of the moon. Other derivations are given. See Proper Names.—

ea signa : cp. Aen. 4, 237, hic nuntius, "news of this" : 7, 595, has poenas ; 12, 468, hoc metu.—monstrum=monestrum : from moneo "to warn" ; hence "a warning."

172—vix—arsere : note that Vergil and especially Homer are fond of putting co-ordinately (parataxis) where we would place one clause subordinate to the other (hypotaxis) ; "scarcely was the image placed in the camp, when there flashed forth sparkling flames from its upraised eyes."—positum scil. est : see v. 10. —castris=in castris. —luminibus : ablative of separation.—arrectis, raised eyes were significant of fury just as downcast eyes were a sign of sullen anger : cf. Aen. 1, 482 : diva solo fixos oculos aversa tenebat.

173—salsus sudor :—sweat is naturally salt ; the epithet adds to the realism of the description. The sweating of images was looked upon as portentous : cp. Livy 22, 1. scuta duo sanguine sudasse : 27, 4, quattuor signa sanguine multo sudasse.

174—terque—trementem : "and thrice from the ground the goddess herself, wonderful to tell, leaped forth bearing her buckler and quivering spear."—solo : abl. of separation :—dictu : give the construction of the supines in -um and -u respectively : F. 174, 2 and 3 ; P. 105. —emicuit : "flashed forth," the apparition of the goddess suddenly appearing and then disappearing like lightning.

175—extemplo taken with canit : "Calchas at once prophesies that the sea must be hazarded in flight, nor may Troy's towers be overthrown by Argive weapons unless they seek anew auspices at Argos, and bring back that divine presence which they have borne over the deep on their carved ships."—temptanda scil. esse : alluding to the dangers of the deep.—canit, often said of oracles, as these were in the hexameter measure and probably chanted : cp. αἰδῶ : Thucydides 2, 21, 2 ; ἦδον χρησμοῦς παντοίοις.—Pergāma (-orum), neut. pl. "the citadel of Troy" : cp. πύργος, "tower" : English—burgh,—borough,—bury : German burg, properly "a fortress."—ni repetant, alluding to the Roman custom of returning to the city of Rome from the camp to take anew the auspices, if anything unlucky happened. For subjunctive : F. 193, ii (b) ; P. 99 (h). —Argis : from the nom. pl. Agri -ōrum : we also find Argos neut. nom. and acc. : from root ARG, "bright," hence the word may mean Brighton : cp. argentum, ἀργός.—numen : the favoring presence of the god.—pelago : the way by which is often put in the ablative : cp. Cic. Fam. x, 9 : via brevior equites praemisi : Livy, 37, 14 : Aegaeo mari traiecit.—curvis—carinis: abl. of accompaniment: cp. the Homeric νῆες γλαφυραί, νῆες κοίλαί.

- 180—et nunc—aderunt: “and now in that they have sought their native Mycenae with the wind and are gathering arms and gods to attend them, after remeasuring the sea, they will be here unawares.”—quod meaning “as to the fact that” with the indic.: F. 181, 2; P. ii, 209. —remenso: from remetior: passive use of a deponent verb: see v. 46.
- 181—digerit: literally, “arranges” i.e., “expounds” in detail what course must be taken to propitiate the gods.
- 183—hanc—piaret: “this image at his warning they reared in recompense for the Palladium and the injured deity, to expiate the horror of sacrilege.”—moniti scil. ab Calchante.—pro numine laeso, i.e., to make amends for the offences committed against the deity.—quae = ut ea: F. 184: P. 93, iv.
- 185—hanc—tueri: “yet Calchas bade them raise it to this vast size with oaken cross-beams, and build it up to heaven that it might not find entry within the gates nor be drawn within the city, nor protect your people under the shelter of the old faith.”—tamen: in spite of the protestations of Sinon that the withdrawal of the deity would hasten the doom of Troy. Note that we have Sinon’s own words 180-188, and 189-194; the words of Calchas are in oblique narrative.—caelo = ad caelum: v. 19.—portis = intra portas.—Note that ne—aut are cumulative, the aut connecting parts of the same general idea, neque = necque, introducing another idea.
- 189—donum Minervae, objective genitive, “gift to Minerva.”—violavisset: pluperfect subjunctive in indirect discourse for future perfect of direct: F. 207, 7; P. 107 (b).
- 190—quod—convertant: “which evil may the gods first turn on himself:” for the subjunctive see F. 148, 4 (c); P. 98 (a).—prius, i.e., before it reaches you.—ipsum = Calchanta.
- 191—futurum, scil. esse: indirect discourse following the verb of saying implied in iussit.
- 192—sin: “if on the other hand.”
- 193—ultro: “unchallenged,” see v. 59. Asia would not merely repel the invading Greeks, but would further carry on an offensive war against them.—Pelopea moenia = Argos, founded by Pelops.

- 194—et—nepotes: “and such destiny awaited the descendants of us:” with ea fata; cp. magnum exitium, v. 190.—nostros: of us Greeks.
- 195—periuri: per in periuro, periurus, perfidus is not per intensive as in permagnus, but a remnant of the same word found in Gk. παρά: cp. παράφρων, “beside one’s self:” hence, “away from.”
- 196—audita scil. est: so capti scil. sumus.—coactis, “forced,” hence, “unnatural:” cp. Ovid, Am., I, 8, 83: discant oculi lacrimare coacti: Iuvenal, I3, I33: vexant oculos humore coacto.
- 197—Note neque—nec; non—non: such variations are not allowable in prose.—Larissaeus, from Larissa, the chief town in Phthia, a district of Thessaly, from which Achilles came, meaning “Rock-town” according to Leaf. It is found in both European and Asiatic Greece.
- 199—hic—magis: “here, another sight, greater, alas, and far more terrible is presented to us hapless mortals.”—miseris scil. nobis: F. 120, 1; P. 82 (e) ii. The famous group of statuary representing the death of Laocoon and his two sons was discovered in A.D. 1506 near the baths of Titus on the Esquiline hill and is now in the Vatican.

Compare carefully Vergil’s pen-picture with the piece of statuary. What are the discrepancies and how would you account for them?

Note (1) the serpents first (primum) kill the two sons and afterwards (post) seize the father as he comes to the rescue; but according to the sculptor the serpents are twined about and kill the father and the sons simultaneously.

(2) In the statuary the figures are nude; in the story, the probability is that the father, at any rate, would have on his priestly vestments.

Henry says, “Sculpture could not represent successive acts; the chisel could fix no more than a single instant of fleeting time. . . . Such is the infinite inferiority of sculpture, and of painting, to poetry. The sculptor, or painter, labors day and night, and for years together, on one object; and, in the end, his work, representing but an instant of time, fails to present to the mind as many ideas as the poet supplies in half a dozen lines, the work, perhaps, of half an hour.”

improvida pectora: “our benighted minds”: improvida, i.e., not foreseeing the future.

- 201—Neptuno: dative of reference used for the genitive: F. 134, 2; P. 82, f. i:—ductus sorte: literally “drawn by lot,” i.e., chosen by lot: a Roman custom is here ascribed to the Trojans: cp. Tacitus Ann. 1, 54: sorte ducti e primoribus civitatis unus et viginti.

202—sollemnes: "accustomed": derived from Oscan sollus=totus and annus: originally applied to religious feasts held yearly: hence, accustomed.

203—ecce: observe the dramatic order of the Latin by translating: "but lo! from Tenedos over the tranquil deep—I shudder while I tell the tale—two serpents with enormous coils press down the seas and advance side by side to the shore."—gemini: often used for duo: cp. Aen. 5, 162, gemini scopuli: 5, 266; geminos lebetas: 6, 894, sunt geminae somni portae: 6, 789; huc geminas nunc flecte acies.—immensis orbibus: ablative of quality: F. 131, 9: P. 85 (c).

206—arrecta, scil. sunt: "rear up." The traditional sea-serpent had a mane: cp. Pindar, Pyth. 10, 47: καὶ ποικίλον κάρα Δρακόντων φόβαισιν ἤλυθε: Plautus Amphi. 5, 1, 56: devolant angues jubati. Livy 43, 13: in aede Fortunae anguem jubatum a compluribus visum esse. Evidently Pliny, a good authority in Natural History, disbelieves the truth of this: cf. 11, 37, draconum cristas qui viderit non reperitur. Milton (Paradise Lost, 7, 495) follows the traditional account:

The serpent, subtlest beast of all the field,
Of huge extent, sometimes, with brazen eyes
And hairy mane terrific.

207—pars—legit: the other part (of the body) skims the sea behind, and in rolling folds they writhe their monstrous backs." The verb lego (so also Gk. λέγω: German legen) is often said of a person picking one's steps: cp. Aen. 9, 392: vestigia retro observata legit. Here said of the monster.

209—fit sonitus spumante salo: Note the hissing sound imitated by the recurring s's (onomatopoeia): "as the sea surges into foam, a sound is heard."

210—ardentesque—ora: "and with their blazing eyes suffused with blood and fire, they licked with quivering tongues their hissing mouths."—oculos: acc. of specification: F. 98, 3; P. 83 (e) iii. Note also here the r sound.

212—visu: ablative of cause.—agmine certo: "with unwavering course."—agmen properly a moving (ago): hence (1) an army on the march; (2) a moving, advance. Both ideas are involved here.

- 213—According to Hyginus the two sons were Antiphantes and Thymbraeus: according to others, Ethron and Melampus.
- 215—morsu: “with their fangs.”
- 216—post=postea.—auxilio: “to their help,” literally, “for a help,” dative of purpose: F. 1, 34, 1; P. 82 (c): some say an ablative of instrument. The force of sub- in subire, succurrere subsidium conveys the idea of support: cp. v. 467.
- 218—bis=dati: “twice encircling his waist, twice encircling his neck with their scaly bodies.”—circum=dati=circumdati is an example of tnesis (a figure in which the preposition is separated from the verb to which it belongs).—collo is a dative.—terga is accusative of specification: see v. 56.
- 219—superant=altis: “they tower above him with their heads and lofty necks.”—capite=cervicibus: ablative of measure: F. 58, 6; P. 85 (g).
- 220—ille: the position of the pronoun indicates a change of subject.—tendit divellere: “struggles to tear asunder.”
- 221—perfusus=veneno: “having his fillets steeped in gore and black venom”: for the accusative see note v. 56: vittas from root VI, “to bend” or “twist together”: cp. vitis, vimen, vicio: ἑρως, “a fellow”: English with.
- 223—qualis mugitus: scil. tollit=tales mugitus tollit quales sunt tauri saucii: “he raises such bellowing as is (the bellowing) of a wounded bull.” The simile is found in Homer, Il. 20, 403.—Note fugit: perfect (corresponding to the gnomic aorist of the Greeks) often expresses an act repeated or customary. The simile may have been suggested by the fact that Laocoon was engaged in sacrificing a bull at the time (v. 202). The bellowing and the struggling of a victim at the altar were looked upon as ill-omened signs. In fugit=excussit we have an example of ὕστερον πρότερον.
- 224—incertam=securim: “shakes from his neck the erring axe.”—incertam, i.e., ill-aimed; cp. certa hasta, “an unerring spear”: certa sagitta, “an arrow that strikes the spot aimed at.”—securim: what words of the third declension have -im in acc. sing.? F. 40.
- 225—at: introduces a change of subject: cp. ἄρα.—gemini: see note v. 203.—lapsu=effugiunt: “glide in flight”: literally “with gliding motion escape.”—lapsu: abl. of manner.—delubra ad summa: “to the high sanctuary,” i.e., to the citadel.—delubrum (from de and luo=λούω, “wash”) the place of expiation, hence “a shrine.”—

Distinguish in meaning draco: from root DRAK, to "look" (cp. δέρκομαι) hence "the bright eyed;" anguis (from ango, ἄγγω, "choke"), "that which chokes or squeezes its prey": serpens (from serpo=ἐρπω "creep"), "that which creeps."

226—Tritonidis scil. deae: we have adj. Tritonis, gen. Tritonidis and Tritonius: for derivation see note on v. 171.—saevae: in withholding her protection from the Trojans: see v. 163.

227—teguntur=se tegunt: "they conceal themselves:" reflexive use of the passive voice.

228—cunctis=cunctorum: see note on v. 201.

229—et-ferunt: "and they say that Laocoon has paid the penalty of his crime deservedly."—scelus=poenas sceleris: cp. Aen. II, 208: scelerum poenas expendimus omnes.

230—qui=quippe qui, utpote qui or quum is: "seeing that he outraged": F. 198, 4; P. 93, iv. Compare the curse on the sailor who killed the albatross in Coleridge's Ancient Mariner.

231—tergo: cp. v. 51 and 52 where the "side," "belly," and "womb" of the beast is struck. But tergus, tergōris and tergum, -i may mean simply "hide" and may apply to all parts of the body.—laeserit—intorserit, are causal, subjunctive or subjunctives of virtual oblique narrative.

233—see note v. 66.

234—dividimus—urbis: "we cleave the walls and we throw open to view the battlements of our city." Generally moenia (root MUN, "to defend") is an outer wall of a city for defensive purposes: murus (= munus from the same root) is a general term for a wall of any kind. Here, however, murus must mean the outer wall, while moenia must be the fortified dwellings within: cp. Aen. 6, 549: moenia lata videt triplici circumdata muro.

235—accingunt=se accingunt: see v. 227, literally "gird themselves," i.e., apply themselves, alluding to the long loose robes of the ancients which were tucked up for active work: hence succinctus, accinctus, "active"; discinctus, "idle."—rotarum lapsus=rotas labentes "smoothly gliding wheels": cf. Hor. Od. I, 12, 10: fluminum lapsus=flumina labentia: cp. Soph. Elec. 216: τρόχων βάσεις.

237—stuppea—intendunt: "draw taut upon its neck the hempen bands:" alluding to the senators and young nobles of Rome drawing the

tensae or sacred cars containing the images of the gods, which were drawn to and from the capitol.

238—feta armis=feta armatis viris: “teeming with armed men.”

239—sacra canunt=sacra carmina canunt: “chant hymns.” Vergil is evidently thinking of the hymns chanted at the secular games when maidens and youths sang songs to Apollo and Diana.

240—minans—urbi: “towering high glides into the midst of the city:” with this meaning of minor cp. Aen. I, geminique minantur in caelum scopuli: from root MIN, “project”: cp. mons minae, “the gable ends of a house.”

241—Note the feeling expressed by this outburst. The line is a quotation from Ennius.

242—Dardanidum=Dardanidarum.—ipso—substitit: “at the very threshold it stood still.”—limen=ligmen: from ligo, “bind:” hence the sill of the door: here the ground of the breach. —portae: connected with per, πόρος, περάω: English -fare in thoroughfare, A.S. faran, “to go.”

243—utero: ablative of specification.

246—tunc—Teucris: “then, too, Cassandra opened her lips to speak the doom that was to be—lips, by heaven’s command, never believed by the Trojans.”—etiam: besides other warnings. For the story see Cassandra in Proper Names.—credita: verbs that govern a dative in the active are almost always used impersonally in the passive, only in poetry have we a few examples of the personal use of such verbs: Horace has imperor, invideor: Ovid, credor more than once.—Teucris: dative: F. 164, I; P. II, 57.

248—nos—urbem: “we, poor wretches, to whom that day was to be the last, deck the shrines of the gods throughout the city with festal boughs.”—quibus esset: the subjunctive may be either causal or concessive: implied in the relative, i.e., quibus esset=quippe is nobis esset or quavis nobis esset: F. 196 and 198; P. 99.—velamus=coronamus: Aen. 3, 405; 3, 545; 5, 72: cf. Homer Il. I, 39: εἰ ποτέ τοι χαρίεντ' ἐπὶ νηὸν ἔρεψα. The leaves would be those of the trees sacred to each particular god: of laurel, to Apollo; oak, to Jove; myrtle, to Venus, etc.

250—vertitur—nox: “meanwhile the sphere of heaven wheels round, and night rushes from the sea.”—vertitur: reflexive use of the passive voice. The ancients believed that the heavens consisted of two hemispheres, one of light and the other of darkness, and by the revolution of those light and darkness were produced: cf. Milton, Paradise Lost, 9, 52—

and now from end to end Night's hemisphere had veiled the horizon round.

Night is said to ‘rush up from the ocean’ in pursuit of the retreating day.

251—Note the effect of the heavy spondees of this line.

252—fusi per urbem: “stretched out to rest throughout the town”: so fusi per herbam, said of the revelling crew of Aeneas: Aen. I, 214.

254—et—Tenedos: “and by this time the Argive host was setting out from Tenedos with its array of ships.”—instructis navibus: note the military term.

255—tacitae—lunae: “amid the favouring stillness of the quiet moon.” Two directly opposite views have been taken of this passage. Some say that the passage shows that the moon was quietly shining, others that there was no moon shining. Some quote in support of the latter view Milton, Samson Agonistes:—

dark
And silent as the moon,
When she deserts the night,
Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.

From v. 340 we know that the moon was up. Vergil brings out prominently the light and calm of the night so as to further the designs of the Greeks.

256—flammas—extulerat: “when the royal bark had raised aloft the fire signal”: this clause is subordinate to the clause containing ibat with which laxat is co-ordinate, laxat being a historical present. With regia puppis: cp. Shakespeare, Henry IV., Pt. I, Act 3, Sc. 3: “Thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the poop.” For quum with the indic. see F. 203, 2; P. 99 (f) v.—effero is the technical word “to raise” the standard.

258—Note the zeugma in laxat: “(releases) the Greeks pent up in the womb and stealthily loosens the pine bars.”

263—It is difficult to see if Machaon was the first to issue from the horse why he should be mentioned seventh. It may be an imitation of Homer, Il. II, 505: ἀριστέοντα Μαχάονα, ποιμένα λαῶν: hence some translate it “peerless.”

265—somno vinoque sepultum: “buried in a drunken slumber.” It is best to make somno vinoque an example of hendiadys = somno vinoso. Ennius (A. 8) has the expression vino domiti somnoque sepulti. Hence some look on sepultum in this passage of Vergil as a zeugma, “o’ercome with wine and buried in sleep,” but the order of the words precludes this.

267—agmina—iungunt: scil. sibi: “unite to themselves their confederate bands.”

268—mortalibus—aegris: cf. Homeric δειλοῖσι βροτοῖσι.

272—raptatus—bigis: “dragged along by the car, as formerly.” After slaying Hector, Achilles fastened his body to his chariot and dragged it thrice around the walls of Troy.

273—traiectus—lora: “having had thongs bored through his swollen feet.” We sometimes find Latin verbs used in a middle sense expressing the action done to one’s self by some one else, or done to one’s self, in imitation of the Greek. The accusative in this case resembles the accusative of specification: cp. note on manus, v. 56.

274—Note the force of illo: cp. ἐκεῖνος, “that illustrious Hector”: F. 118, 4 (b); P. 92 (c).

275—qui—Achilli: “who returns having donned the spoils of Achilles.” —redit: is a graphic present for the perfect rediit.—exuvias: we can say in the active, exuvias mihi induo, and in the passive, exuvias ego induor or exuviis me induo and exuviis ego induor.—Achilli: as if from the nominative Achilleus, gen. Achillei, contracted Achilli: see note on Ulixi: v. 7. Hector slew Patroclus, who had donned the armour of his friend Achilles.

276—vel—ignis: scil. qui redit: “who returns after hurling the Phrygian flames against the ships of the Greeks.”—puppibus = in puppes: see note v. 36.

277—squalentem barbam—patrios, scil. qualis erat: “Ah me! how sad he looked, wearing as he did a squalid beard and hair all matted with blood, and all the many wounds which he received around his ancestral walls."—vulnera: the wounds he received by being dragged around the walls of Troy.

279—ultra: without waiting for an answer: see v. 59.—flens ipse: "in tears too myself."

281—lux Dardaniae: lux is the Homeric φάος, "safety": cp. Hom. II. vi. 6, φάος δ' ἐτάροισιν ἔθηκεν: 2 Sam. xxi, 17, when David is called "the light of Israel": Luke ii, 32, φῶς εἰς ἀποκάλυψιν ἔθνων.

283—expectate: vocative for nominative: "from what regions dost thou, Hector, long expected, come?"—ut: exclamatory join with aspicimus. The meaning of ut in such cases must be inferred from the context, here ut=ut libente: "how gladly!"

284—labores: cp. πόνος: "sufferings."

285—quae—vultus? "what cruel cause has marred the serene beauty of thy face?"

287—ille mihi, scil. respondit: see note v. 42.—nec—moratur: "nor pays he any heed to my idle question": for this use of moror: cp. Aen. 5, 400, nec dona moror, "nor can I for gifts": so Horace Epist. I, 15, 17: vina nihil moror illius orae: 2, I, 164: nil moror officium quod me gravat.

289—nate—dea: "goddess-born": for deā: F. 156, 4: P. 85 (h).

290—ruit—Troia: "Troy from its very summit is sinking in ruins": cp. II. 13, 772, ὤλετο πᾶσα κατ' ἄκρης Ἴλιος αἰπείνῃ.

291—sat—datum: "you have fulfilled your duty to your native land and to Priam"—sat=satis used as an indecl. neut.—satisdare is a legal phrase for giving security for payment of a debt, here for the payment itself, more commonly expressed by satisfacere.

292—hac: "by this (right hand) of mine."

293—sacra suosque—Penates: "her rites and household gods."—sacra: seems to be a general term for the religious ceremonies, and penates a particular term. What the penates were it is difficult to say. They were probably national deities represented in little images of wood or stone, and the word may be derived from PA, "to protect" or "feed": cp. pater, pasco, penus.

294—his—ponto: "for these seek a city, a mighty city, which thou shalt erect at length after wandering over the sea." This of course refers to the future city of Rome.—moenia quaere, magna—quae: with this punctuation (the one adopted in our text), magna is predicative:

"which thou shalt build mighty." The other punctuation, however, moenia quaere magna, pererrato, is common.

296—vittas Vestamque=Vestam vittatam: "(the image of) Vesta wearing a fillet": hendiadys.

297—aeternum—ignem: the penates of the family were closely identified with Vesta, the goddess of the hearth. In the temple of Vesta at Rome, "the eternal fire" was maintained, the extinguishing of which foreboded the doom of the city.

298—diverso—luctu: "meanwhile the town is filled with tumultuous woe in all directions," or, more freely, "throughout the city meanwhile confusion reigns with manifold cries of agony."—luctu: the wailing for the lost. Possibly diverso means "in a distant quarter of the city." Note the emphatic position of diverso. This, with the latter interpretation, is particularly significant as marking the transition.

299—magis—magis: join with clarescunt: "the noises begin to grow clearer and clearer."—secretæ—obtectæ: both predicates of recessit: "though my father Anchises' house lay deep withdrawn and screened by trees." In Homer Anchises is not an inhabitant of Troy, but an independent prince of Dardania.

301—armorumque—horror: "and the clash of arms rolls onward."—ingruit: root GAR, "to call" or "shout": cp. garrire, garulus, grus: γῆρανος, γῆρβειν. Note the imitative harmony produced by the recurring of the r sound.

302—excitior: middle, "I shake myself from sleep."—fastigia: properly the gable of the roof: here put for the roof itself. Fastigia tecti, i.e., tectum fastigatum, a sloping or ridged roof.

304—The construction is: adsto veluti....stupet pastor. The contrast is between Aeneas listening to the din of battle and the shepherd hearing the roaring of a conflagration or a torrent from the top of a crag. The simile is suggested by Homer, Il. 4, 455. Cp. Thomson's imitation in his Seasons, Autumn, v. 340-348.—furentibus Austris: "when the winds are raging": abl. abs.

305—montano flumine is a kind of ablative of quality with torrens: "a whirling mountain torrent," or "the roaring torrent of a mountain stream."

306—sternit—sternit: note the rhetorical effect gained by repetition, and cp. 325, fuimus—fuit: 483, adparet—adparent: 499, vidi—vidi: 560, subiit—subiit.—bomque labores is the Homeric ἔργα βοῶν.

- 307—inscius : not knowing what to make of it because he is still dazed.
- 309—manifesta : perhaps a predicate, "the truth is evident." Others make fides one of the nominatives to patescunt, but the two distinct predicates have double the force and energy of a single predicate.—Danaum : see v. 14.—fides here is not "faith," but "that which causes faith" : cp. πίστις : Sophocles Electra 877, τὴν ἰδοῦσα πίστιν.
- 310—dedit ruinam : "has fallen in ruins," literally, "has made a fall."—dare, from root DHA ; cp. τίθημι is often used in the sense of "make" : νόμους ἔθηκε. That the house of Deiphobus was first attacked is evident from Homer, Od. 8, 517 :—

ἄλλον δ' ἄλλῃ ἄειδε πόλιν κεραῖζεμεν αἰπὴν, αὐτὰρ Ὀδυσσεῖα προτὶ δώματα Διφύβον βήμεναι ἤετ' Ἄρηα σὺν ἀντιθέῳ Μενελάῳ.

- 311—Vulcano superante : abl. abs. : "amid the overpowering flames" : Vulcanus = ignis (metonymy).—proximus Ucalegon = domus Ucalegontis quae proxima erat : the owner is put for the house (metonymy). Note the lively effect of the sudden introduction of the figure.
- 312—igni—relucent : "gleam with the blaze." What words in the 3rd declension may have the ablative in -e, or -i ? F. 40 ; P. 49 (c).
- 313—This is a fine example of imitative harmony (onomatopoeia) : the braying of the trumpets is well represented by the r's. Therē is an anachronism here, as trumpets were not used in Homer's time to give signals in battle.
- 314—nec—armis : "nor in (taking) arms is there any reason good."—satis = satis.—armis = in armis capiendis.
- 315—bello : dative of purpose : "but my feelings burn to gather a troop for war."
- 316—furor—armis : "fury and wrath drove me headlong, and I think how noble it is to die in arms."—succurrit : literally, "it occurs to me that it is noble" : cp. Horace, Od. 3, 2, 13 : dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.
- 318—telis : ablative of separation : F. 309, 27 ; P. 85, k. i.
- 319—Othryades : for patronymics : see F. 304 (h) ; P. 75.
- 321—trahit : zeugma : "carries the sacred vessels and the conquered gods in his hands and hurries along his little grandson." For the latter meaning cp. v. 457, puerum Astyanacta trahebat.—Sacra scil. vasa.

Henry, however, remarks on this: "Deos is the explanation of sacra, and the meaning is, not 'the sacred objects and the gods' images' but 'the sacred images of the gods,' first because Panthus would be too much encumbered by three different objects—sacred things, gods' images, and his grandson: and secondly, because we find sacra by itself and without explanation meaning 'sacred images.' Ovid, Met. 10, 696 and Fasti 1, 527."

—cursu: "distractedly": literally "with speed."—limina: "to the house of Anchises."

322—quo—Panthu? literally "in what position is our state?" or "how fares our state?"—quo loco=quo statu: Hor. 1, Ep. 12, 25: quo sit res Romana loco.—summa res: Nettleship shows that summa res is an old phrase for the later res publica, "our all," "the main chance." Others take the meaning to be, "where is the struggle hottest?"—Panthu vocative: Panthus=Πάνθου=Πάνθοος: voc. Πάνθοε, Πάνθου.—prendimus: the indicative is far more vivid than the customary subjunctive, "what stronghold are we to occupy?" Henry's interpretation is: "If we throw ourselves into the "arx," what kind of an "arx" shall we find it to be? Is the "arx" any longer defensible?" Certainly this interpretation, although somewhat strained, relieves the question of that insipidity which otherwise characterizes it. This second clause then becomes a supplement to the first, "quo res summa loco?" quite in accord with V's style. The fact that Panthus has just come from the "arx" and that Aeneas has resolved to go thither (v. 315) lends force to Henry's interpretation.

325—fuimus fuit; the perfect of sum is often used euphemistically: "we were," but "are no longer": cp. Tib. 3, 5, 3, sive erimus seu nos fata fuisse velint: "whether we shall be alive or whether the fates will that we should be dead:" cp. Gen. xlii, 13, "the youngest is this day with our father and one is not:" Matt. ii, 18, "Rachel weeping for her children and would not be comforted because they are not."

327—transtulit: according to the Scholiast on Aes. Theb. 310, the gods departed in a body from Troy on the night of its destruction bearing their images with them: cp. v. 351.

- 328—arduus—equus: “the horse, as it stands towering in the centre of the town, pours forth armed men and triumphant Sinon insolently spreads fire and confusion.”—moenibus: see note v. 334.
- 330—bipatentibus: “wide open”: with both halves thrown open.
- 331—millia quot=tot millia quot.
- 332—angusta viarum: either for angustas vias, “the narrow streets,” or for angusta loca viarum “the narrow places of the streets.”
- 333—stat—stricta: “the keen sword stands drawn with gleaming edge”: mucro, akin to ἀμύσσω=ἀμυκ-γω, “to scratch.”
- 334—primi—vigiles: either “the guard at the entrance,” or “the guards first attacked.”
- 336—numine: “by the will.”
- 337—tristis Erinys: “fell Fury.” Wagner explains Erinys here as the demon of battle: cp. Lucan, 4, 187, civilis Erinys.
- 339—maximus armis: others read for armis, annis.
- 340—oblatis per lunam: “meeting us in the moonlight.” Scan this verse: see Introduction p. xviii 5 (a).
- 342—illis—amore: “it so happened that he had come to Troy in these (direful) days fired with frantic love for Cassandra.”—Cassandrae: objective genitive.
- 343—insano: “because it hurried him to his ruin.”—Conington. (1) qui belli tempore amabat; (2) aut perpetuum epitheton amoris est.—Servius. The second interpretation of Servius seems the best: i.e., “passionate,” “violent”: cp. Plant. Curc. I, 3, 20: nam bonum est paucillum amare sane; insane non bonum est, and Ovid Art. Amat. I, 371: insano iuret amore mori. Understood in this sense, the epithet raises our respect not only for Coroebus but for Cassandra, in the same degree as, understood in the former sense, it lowers it.—Henry.
- 344—gener used proleptically because he does not seem to have ever married Cassandra. According to Roman custom, after betrothal relationship (affinitas) was considered complete: cp. Tacitus Ann. XII, 4: praebabat Caesar aures accipiendis adversus generum suspicionibus (said of Lucius Silanus who was newly betrothed to Caesar's daughter, Octavia.) The meaning then is: “in hope of becoming a son-in-law he was bringing aid.”
- 345—qui—audierit=quippe qui—audierit: “inasmuch as he did not listen to the warnings of his raving betrothed.”

348—incipio super his. It is best to take super adverbially and to supply dictis with his: “thereupon I begin with these words.”—fortissima frustra: bring out the alliteration by translating “bootlessly brave.”

350—sit: F. 176; P. 99 (d).

351—excessere scil. ex urbe Troia. It seems to have been a universal belief among the ancients that the gods left a doomed city. Josephus relates that during the siege of Jerusalem voices more than human were heard crying on the day of Pentecost: μεταβαίνωμεν ἐντείθεν, “let us go hence:” cp. Aesch. Theb. 207:—

ἀλλ' οὖν θεοὺς
τοὺς τῆς ἀλόισης πόλεος ἐκλείπειν λόγος.

So also Milton, Ode on Nativity:—

Apollo from his shrine
Can no more divine,
With hollow shriek the steep of Delphos leaving.

352—quibus: ablative of instrument: “by whose grace this empire stood firm:” for the force of steterat: see v. 56.

353—incensae: emphatic from its position: “in flames is the city you are trying to succour.”—succurritis: a conative present.—et is epexegetic (i.e. explanatory); the clause introduced by it explaining how they would meet death: “let us meet death by rushing into the heart of the foe.” Usually the passage is explained as an example of ὑστερον πρότερον: “let us die and let us rush into the midst of the foe”= “let us rush into the midst of the foe and die.”—arma= armatos hostes.

355—animis: “courage.”—additus scil. est—lupi ceu: this may be an echo of the Homeric λύκοι ὥς ending the line in Iliad II, 72; 16, 156.

356—improba: generally denoting excess of all kinds in Vergil: cp. improbus ira, “excessive in rage:” improbus anser, “greedy goose:”

improbis amor, insatiate love:” improbis labor, “unflinching toil.” With improba ventris—rabies may be compared the Shakespearian “belly-pinched wolf.” Possibly here a strong personal epithet: “wicked,” i.e., “painful;” cp. “villainous saltpetre.”—King Henry IV.

- 357—exegit caecos: “has driven them blindly forth,” i.e., to prowl at random.
- 358—siccis: “thirsting for blood.” The second part of the simile is without the connective sic with per tela, per hostes.
- 359—mediaeque—iter: “and we pursue our way into the heart of the city.”—mediae urbis is a genitive of quality: F. 124; P. 81 (e).
- 360—nox—umbra: “dark night hovers round us with encircling gloom.” Henry claims that nox here is figurative for “the gloom of death,” referring to Aen. 6, 866, and Hom., Od., 20, 351.
- 361—quis—labores? “who can unfold the carnage of that night, who (can unfold) in language the losses, or who is able to measure its troubles by his tears.” Note the studied alliteration, funera fando: lacrimis labores.—fando: see note v. 6.
- 363—dominata: “that has held sway.”
- 364—plurima—limina: “unnumbered both throughout the streets and the houses and the awful courts of the gods lie strewed the lifeless corpses.” With inertia corpora: cp. ἀνέμνηα κάρηνα of Homer.
- 366—poenas dant sanguine: “pay forfeit with their life:” cp. v. 72.
- 367—quondam—Danai: “at times even to the hearts of the vanquished valour returns and the victorious Greeks fall.” Note the alliterations victis—virtus—victores.
- 368—crudelis: “ruthless.”
- 369—pavōr: Note the quantity of the final syllable of favor: possibly long, because the stress of the voice (ictus) falls on it and also because the letter r is trilled: cp. v. 411.—plurima—imago: “many a form of death”=“death in many a form:” cp. Thucy. 3, 81: πᾶσα ἰδέα κατέσθη θανάτου.
- 370—se—offert: “comes to meet us.”
- 371—socia agmina credens: socia agmina (esse) credens.
- 372—Notice the emphasis gained by putting the adjective at the beginning of the line with a pause after it: so also infelix, v. 345: saucius, v. 529.—ultro: “unaccosted by us.”

374—rapiunt—feruntque: ordinarily the phrase is ferre et agere (cp. φέρειν καὶ ἄγειν): ferre referring to the “carrying off” of portable property, and agere to the “driving” of captives or cattle. Here there is little or no distinction between the words: Tr. “plunder and pillage.”

377—sensit—hostes: a Graecism for sensit se delapsum esse: cp. ἦσθετο ἐμπεσών. So also Milton, Paradise Lost, 9, 792:—

greedily she gorged without restraint
And knew not eating death.

i.e., that she was eating.

So also Catullus, iv, 2:—

Phaselus ille quam videtis hospites
Ait fuisse navium celerrimus.

379—aspris sentiibus nitens: “struggling amid rough brambles:” for the abl.: F., 309, 37; P. 85, k. i. The same simile occurs in Homer Iliad, 3, 33. Note here aspris = asperis.

380—refugit: perfect of instantaneous action or aorist. Note the recurring dactyls and the repetition of re- well brings out the sudden recoil of the unwary traveller.

381—attollentem—tumentem: “as it rises in anger and puffs out its deep blue throat.” —caerulea = caelulea from caelum, “sky,” hence, “skyblue.”

388—dextra: for the more usual dextram.

389—insignia: devices on the shields, crests of helmets, or any other mark that would serve to distinguish one warrior from another. Perhaps badge seems nearest to it in English.

390—dolus—requirat: construe quis in hoste requirat utrum dolus (sit adhibendus) an virtus: “who in the case of a foe would ask whether fraud or courage is to be employed?”—requirat: rhetorical question.

391—ipsi: i.e., the enemy will themselves supply the arms we are to use against them.

392—comantem—galeam: cp. Homeric κόρυς ἱπποδασειᾶ.

393—induitur: “dons”: reflexive or middle use: cp. 511, ferrum cingitur.

396—haud—nostro: “not under the protection of our own gods.” By donning the Greek armour they were no longer under the protection of the Trojan gods.

398—Danaum: see v. 14.—Orco=ad Orcum: see v. 36.

399—cursu: “speedily”: cp. Aen. 5, 265: cp. ὀρόμῳ.

402—seclunt: a sense construction: see note v. 32.—conduntur=se condunt: “hide themselves”: a reflexive use of the passive corresponding to the middle voice.

402—heu—divis: “alas! it is not right for any one to trust at all to the gods against their will.”—nilil is the acc. of specification. With fas supply est. Distinguish fas est=χρή, said of the will of heaven; jus est=δεῖ, said of human right.

404—a templo—Minervae: “from the temple, aye, from the very shrine of Minerva.”—templum (cp. Gk. τέμενος) is applied to the whole building and the land enclosed for sacred purposes (from τέμνειν, “to cut off”); adytum (a, “not,” δέειν, “enter”) is the “unenterable” place where the image of the goddess was kept. The Oilean Ajax was said to have dragged Cassandra and the image to which she was clinging from the temple.

The precincts of religious buildings have from time immemorable been places of refuge: cp. “The Sanctuary” at Westminster. The altar was considered especially inviolable: cp. I. Kings, ii, 28; Matt. xxiii, 25.

407—non—Coroebus: “Coroebus with maddened soul brooked not the sight.”—furiata mente: abl. of description.

409—densis armis=densatis armis: “closing our ranks.”

- 410—Note primum : tum (v. 413) ; etiam (v. 420).
- 411—nostrorum, scil. sociorum or amicorum.—obruimur. Note the quantity of -ūr. A final syllable naturally short may be lengthened when it is caesural : cp. Aen. 4, 64 ; 3, 464.—miserrima : because inflicted by friends.
- 412—faciē : “appearance,” literally “make” (from facio).—Graecarum errore iubarum : “by the mistake caused by our Grecian plumes” : subjective genitive.
- 413—ereptae—ira : “in wrath at the rescue of the maid.”—virginis : causal genitive. Latin is sadly deficient in verbal nouns ; their place is often supplied by the perf. part. passive : cp. v. 643, capta urbs, “the capture of the city” ; ab urbe condita, “from the foundation of the city.” Milton uses the same idiom in Paradise Lost, 9, 16 :—
- or rage
Of Turnus for Lavinia dispossessed.
- 414—accerrimus : “most fiercely” : The Oilean Ajax felt aggrieved at the loss of his prize.

- 416—adversi—equis : “as sometimes, when a hurricane bursts forth, the west and south winds strive in opposing conflict, and the east wind exulting in the coursers of the Dawn.”—adversi, predicate.—lactus—equis is the Homeric ἰπποχάρμης.
- 418—Note the alliterative harmony of this line : translate, “(then) creak the forests and fierce in foam Nereus stirs up the seas from their lowest depths.”—spumeus equally applicable to the angry god and angry sea.
- 421—tota—urbe : note that the abl. and not per with acc. is the usual construction when totus accompanies a noun.
- 422—mentita : “false” : see v. 46.
- 423—ora—signant : “and they mark the jarring accent of our speech” : literally, “our lips disagreeing in speech (with their own).” In Homer the Trojans and Greeks alike speak Greek. Vergil means here that there was a slight difference in dialect or accent.
- 424—ilicet : “thereupon.” Originally ilicet=ire licet, was the technical word used by the priests after the sacrifice or by the consul after an assembly. Then came its interjectional meaning.
- 425—divae : Minerva.

- 426—unus : imparts to superlatives or to adjectives of a superlative idea an additional force : cp. εἰς ἄριστος, “by far the best” : Homer, Iliad, 12, 243 : εἰς οἰωνὸς ἄριστος, ἀμύνεσθαι περὶ πάτρης. Tr. : “the justest of the just.”
- 428—dis—visum : “heaven willed otherwise.” The meaning of course is ‘Heaven’s ways are not ours’ : cp. Homer, Od. 1, 234 : νῦν δ’ ἐτέρως ἐβουλόντο θεοὶ κακὰ μητιώοντες. Seneca recommends his friend on the occasion of any loss to say constantly without complaining, dis aliter visum est, or rather di melius scil. dent.
- 430—labentem : “in thy fall.”—nec—texit : cp. Homer, Il. 1, 28 : μή νύ τοι οὐ χραίσμη σκηπτρον καὶ στέμμα θεοῖο.
- 431—flamma—meorum : “expiring flame of my countrymen.” The burning city was the funeral pyre of her defenders.—et flamma, etc. : explanatory of the previous clause.
- 433—Supply me before vitavisse.—vices : “encounter” : root VICK, “to move” : cp. Φεικειν : vitare (= victare), vicissim : German weichen, “a change,” “turn” : English weak.—si—manu : “if fate had so willed that I should fall, I earned (my fall) by my deeds.—ut caderem belongs to si fata fuissent and not to meruisse.
- 436—gravior : “somewhat enfeebled.”—Ulixi : “caused by Ulysses” : subjective genitive. For the form see v. 7.

- 441—acta testudine : “by the advancing shielded column.” The testudo consisted of a body of men who locked their shields together and held them over their heads : cp. Tennyson, Dream of Fair Women :—
- heroes tall,
Dislodging pinnacle and parapet
Upon the tortoise creeping to the wall.
- 442—parietibus : see note on v. 18 : it may be a dat. or abl.—postesque—gradibus : “and hard by the door posts themselves they struggle up the rungs.”—gradibus : the steps of the scaling ladders.
- 443—clipeosque—obiciunt : “and (thus) protected, with their left hands present their shields against the missiles.” Others take clipeos governed either by protecti used here in a middle sense or by obiciunt : “placing their shields before them with the left hand they present them (i.e., the shields) against the missiles.”

- 444—fastigia : “ battlements.”
- 445—tecta—culmina : “ the roof covering.”
- 446—his—telis : “ with such weapons, when they see that the last hour is come, now in death’s extremity they prepare to defend themselves.”
- 448—decora alta : “ stately splendour.”
- 449—imas obsedere fores : “ have blockaded the doors below.”
- 451—instaurati animi : scil. sunt : “ our spirits are braced anew.”
- 452—auxilio : “ to aid ” : dative of purpose.
- 453—limen—tergo : “ there was a threshold, and a secret door and a passage connecting the chambers of Priam’s palace one with another, and a gate in the rear unobserved,”—limen=ligmen : properly, “ that which binds,” hence the sill or lintel.—peruius usus : by entering the door, one had access to the different rooms.—relicti : perhaps means overlooked by the assailants and unnoticed by the defenders.
- 455—infelix : notice the emphatic position of this word.
- 457—soceros : “ to her parents ” : in the masculine term are included Priam and Hecuba, the father and mother of her husband Hector.—avo = ad avum : see v. 36 ; cp. Plato Apol. 24, D. : ἐμὲ εἰσάγεις τοῖσι καὶ κατηγορεῖς.
- 458—summi fastigia culminis : “ to the ridge of the roof ” : for fastigia : v. 302.
- 460—in præcipiti : “ on the brink,” “ on the sheer edge.”—summisque—tectis : “ and rising with its roof close to the stars.”
- 462—Danaum : see v. 14.—solitæ, scil. sunt. What verbs are semi-deponent ?
- 463—adgressi—impulimusque : “ assailing with iron bars where the topmost stories afforded weak joinings, we wrench it from its deep foundations and push it forward.”—summa tabulata are the stories that rise above the roof of the main building. Note the present convellimus represents a continued act and impulimus a single, momentary one.
- 465—ea—trahit : “ it toppling over suddenly falls with a crash in ruin.”
- 467—subeunt : “ come to their aid.”
- 469—vestibulum : the open space before the door of a Roman house. Some derive it from ve-sti-bu-lum, “ a place for standing outside ” : from ve-sto.

470—telis—aena : “gleaming in arms of brazen sheen” : note the hen-diadys : cp. Homer Il. 13, 341 : ἀνγὴ χαλκείη κορύθων ἀπὸ λαμπομενῶν.

471—qualis—trisolcis : “like as when a snake fattened on baleful herbs, whom chill winter kept swollen underground, now all new, its slough cast off, and shining in youth, rolls along with breast erect, its slimy length towering to the sun, and in its mouth it makes its three-forked tongue quiver.” It was a common belief among the ancients that the snake drew its venom from the food on which it fed. The simile is taken from the Iliad 22, 93, when Hector is awaiting the attack of Achilles :—

ὥς δὲ δράκων ἐπὶ χειτῇ ὀρέστερος ἄνδρα μένησιν, βεβρωκῶς κακὰ φάρμακ' ἐδν δε τέ μιν χόλος οἶνος, σμερδαλέον δὲ δέδορκεν ἐλίσσόμενος περὶ χειτῇ.

“As a serpent of the mountains upon his den awaiteth a man, having fed on evil poisons, and fell wrath hath entered into him, and terribly he glareth as he coileth himself about his den” : cp. Shelley's Hellas ad finem :—

Her winter weeds outworn.*

So also Tennyson, The Two Voices, when he describes the dragon-fly :—

*An inner impulse rent the veil,
Of that old husk; from head to tail
Came out clear plates of sapphire mail.*

—novus—iuvēta : probably Vergil is thinking of the other name of Pyrrhus, Neoptolemus, “young warrior.”—ore : local ablative.

476—agitator equorum = Homeric ἡνίοχος ἵππων.

477—Scyria pubēs : Pyrrhus brought a number of warriors from Scyros, one of the Cyclades, where his grandfather Lycomedes dwelt : Hom. Il. 19, 325.

479—dura—limina : “the stubborn door” : for limen see note on v. 458.

480—perrumpit—vellit : the present expresses incomplete and continuous action, and also an attempt : “is striving to burst through and wrench” : while the perfect cavavit—dedit : a momentary complete act : “and now having cut out a panel, he has hewn a breach in the stout oak and made a huge opening with a yawning mouth.” The hinges (cardines) in a Roman house were not as with us fastened to the side of the door, but were pivots working in sockets, one in the lintel (limen superum) and the other in the sill (limen). The doors were double doors (valvae).—cardo: from KRAD, “to move,” “to swing”: cp. cor., καρδία, κράδῃ, κραδαίνω, κέρδαζ.

487—miscetur: “is in confusion.” The domus interior probably refers to the woman’s apartments, γυναικωνίτις, which in a Greek house were in the back.—cavae aedes: either the “vaulted” or “hollow halls,” or=cavaedium, an opening in the roof of the atrium over the impluvium or cistern containing rain water.

488—ululare: often said of a woman’s shriek of grief as vagire is of an infant’s wail. It may be observed that though ὀλοῦζω is etymologically connected with ululare, it generally is applied to female invocations of gods or of joy, and seldom said of grief: cp. English howl.—aurea: the contrast is in the splendour of the sky and the wretchedness of the palace.

489—tectis=in tectis.

490—The kisses were a sign of sorrowful parting: cp. Ovid Metam. 13, 412:—

Dardanidas matres patriorum signa deorum
Dum licet amplexas.

491—vi patria: “in all his father’s might”: abl. manner. Achilles was the father of Pyrrhus.

492—labat—crebro: “totters before the frequent blows of the battering ram.” Scan this line: v. 16.

494—aditus: cognate object: “they burst an entrance.”

496—non sic—trahit: “not so furiously when the river bursting his banks has gone forth foaming and has beaten down the opposing dykes with its whirling tide, it rushes raging over the fields in a mass and throughout all the plains it carries away the herds and the stalls together.” Note the double alliteration in v. 498. No doubt this would be a familiar image to Vergil seen both on the Mincius and the Padus.—cumulo: abl. of manner.

499—ipse: “with my own eyes.”

501—centumque muros: according to Homer (Iliad 6, 244), Priam had fifty sons and fifty daughters. The hundred mentioned here must refer to both daughters-in-law and daughters.

503—illi: "those famous."

504—barbarico: to a Greek, all nations outside of Greece were barbarians, especially the Asiatic nations. The phrase "barbaric gold" suggests the idea of Oriental magnificence: cp. Milton's Paradise Lost, 2, 3:—

Or when the gorgeous East with richest hand
Show'rs on her kings barbaric pearl and gold.

The Romans often adorned the walls of their houses and temples with the spoils of war.

507—convulsa—limina: "the bursting of the doors of his house."

510—ferrum cingitur: "girds on his useless sword": middle use.

511—fertur moriturus: "is rushing resolved to die."

512—nudoque—axe: "under the open canopy of heaven." Vergil has probably had in his mind a Greek house here. The atrium was the main hall of a Roman house in which were the images of the penates and an altar. The roof of this was partly open and below the open space was a cistern (impluvium). Around it ran a pillared portico to which rooms opened, with an altar to Jupiter hospitatis (Ζεύς ἐρκέτορ).

Horace also alludes to the custom of planting trees around the atrium: Od. 3, 10, 5: nemus inter pulchra satum tecta: cp. 1, 10, 22: nempe inter varias nutritur sive columnas.

516—praecipites: cp. Tennyson, In Memoriam, xv: "The rooks are blown about the skies."

518—sumptis iuvenalibus armis: "donning his youthful armour."

519—mens dira: "so dreadful a thought."

520—cingi: "to gird yourself": reflexive.

521—defensoribus istis: "such defenders as you." The idea is that in prayers, not in arms, our hope is: cp. Shakespeare, Coriolanus, I, 2:

For the dearth,
The gods, not the patricians make it ; and
Your knees do them, not arms, must help.

522—non scil. egeret from the eget preceding: "the hour would not need such aid and such defenders, were even my own Hector now beside us."

523—tandem: some say, "retire, I beseech thee, hither," or "come hither, for it is high time." Conington says: "while yet there is time."

524—moriere simul: "you will die along with us."

526—elapsus—caede: "having escaped the sword of Pyrrhus."

527—porticibus longis: "flies adown the long cloisters": abl. of the road by which one goes: see note v. 175.—lustrat: "traverses."

529—saucius: note the emphatic position of the adjective.—illum—insequitur: "him eagerly Pyrrhus follows in act to deal a deadly blow."—infesto=infesto: root GHAN, Gk. θεω—Lat. FEND, "to strike"; cp. defendo, θείω.

530—iam iamque: note that the repetition of iam makes the description vivid: "now now he holds him in his grasp, and follows hard upon him with his spear." The meaning is not that he actually holds him in his grasp, but he is so close to him that he seems to have caught him: cp. Vergil Aen. 12, 754; iam, iamque tenet, similisque tenenti increpuit malis, said of a hound after a deer.

533—quamquam—tenetur: "though he is now hemmed in by death on every side."

535—at: a frequent particle in imprecations: "Nay, may the gods, he cries, if there is any kind power in heaven which regards such deeds, render you all the thanks you deserve, and yield you your due reward, for such a crime, for such a sacrilege, you who have made me witness the death of my son before my eyes, and have defiled a father's face with his death."—pietas commonly used of the dutiful feeling of men to the gods, to their country or to others who have a claim on them. Here, it is used for the reciprocal feeling of gods to men: so Aen. 5, 688.—quae—curet: consecutive use of the relative: F. 188; P. 93, iv.—qui fecisti: direct address: "thou who hast made." Distinguish this from qui—feceris. The infinitive cernere is rare after facere for ut cernerem.—foedasti: defilement from seeing his son's death.

- 540—at—Priamo: “but that hero, Achilles, whose son you falsely say you are, was not like you in the case of Priam, his foe.”—at: see note v. 485.—satum from sero.—quo: ablative of origin.—in hoste: cp. ἐνὶ ἐχθρῷ: cp. Vergil Ecl. 8, 83: Daphnis me malus urit, ego hanc in Daphnide laurum. This does not mean that Pyrrhus was illegitimate, but that his nature and conduct showed him to be no true son of Achilles.—iura—crubuit: “he respected the right and trusts of a suppliant.”—fidem supplicis: the confidence reposed by the suppliant and the protection in return.—crubuit: ἠδεῖτο, ἤσχετο.
- 542—corpusque: after the death of Hector, Priam went to the tent of Achilles to beg the corpse of Hector. Achilles granted his request and allowed him to depart in safety.
- 544—sine ictu: “without inflicting a wound.”
- 545—rauco: “hollow sounding”: root RU, “roar”: cp. ὀ-ρύ-μαδος, ὠ-ρύ-ω: ru-mor, rugire, rumen (= rugmen): A. S. rún, rune (originally “a murmur”).—repulsum, scil. est.
- 546—umbone: the umbo was the projecting boss of the shield, constructed in such a way as to turn aside a weapon. It was covered with leather: root AMBH, “to project,” cp. umbilicus, ὀμφαλος.
- 548—Pelidae genitori=ad Pelidam genitorem.—tristia: “fell.”
- 550—ipsa: “very.”
- 553—lateri=in latus: see note on v. 19.
- 555—tulit=abstulit.
- 556—populis terrisque: “proud in so many nations and countries:” abl. of cause.
- 557—litore=in litore. Vergil may have in mind the sad fate of Pompey. According to Servius, Priam’s body was exposed on the Sigeum promontory.
- 559—at: see note v. 486.—saevus—horror: “fell dead.”
- 560—subiit, scil. animum.
- 562—deserta: “desolate.”
- 563—Scan this line and tell any irregularity in the scansion.
- 564—copia: “force:” for the more usual copiae: cp. Aen. II, 734:
incurrunt densi simul omnis copia Teucrum.
- 565—deseruere—dedere: “all had left me with utter weariness and either flung themselves to the earth or had sunk in despair into the flames.”

567—This episode of Vergil is left out of all good MSS., though Servius says it was written by Vergil but left out by Varius and Tucca. The main argument against the genuineness is that in Aeneid 6, 570 seqq. Helen is spoken of as betraying Deiphobus to the Greeks.—super eram=supereram, tnesis.—adeo: (cp. δή) emphasizes the word to which it is joined.

570—erranti: not on the ground, but on the roof. He does not descend till v. 632.

571—sibi goes with praemetuens, not with infestos: “she fearing for herself the Trojans who were hostile to her on account of the overthrow of Troy.”—infestos: for the derivation, see v. 529.

573—Erinyes: so Aeschylus (Ag. 749) calls Helen νυμφόκλαντος Ἐρινύς.

574—invisa: “a hateful being:” others take it “unseen.”

575—animo=in animo.

576—sceleratas—poenas=sceleris poenas: “to exact vengeance for guilt.”

577—scilicet: “forsooth:” generally used in bitter irony.

578—regina: “in queenly state,” i.e., not as a captive like the other Trojan ladies.

579—coniugium: abstract for the concrete coniugem: cp. remigium for remiges: Aen. 3, 471.—patres=parentes: according to Euripides (Orestes 473) Tyndareus and Leda are represented as being alive after the death of Clytemnestra, but Homer (Od. 11, 298) introduces Leda in the shades.

580—comitata: passive use of a deponent verb: see note v. 46.

581—occiderit—arserit—sudarit: the future perfect is often used to express indignation that an event spoken of as future should be realized. The sense is “shall she return now that Priam has been murdered, Troy burned, Dardania bathed in blood?”

584—habet: “brings with it.”

586—animumque—flammae: “and it shall be my delight to have filled my soul with avenging fire.” No where else does explere govern a genitive, though many other verbs of fulness take one.

589—cum—deam: “when my kind mother, revealing the goddess, presented herself in visible presence, never before so clear to my sight, and she shone in pure radiance through the night, in form and stature such as she is wont to appear to the heavenly host."—cum—obtulit: when does cum take the indicative?—ante=antea.—deam: there is no need of supplying se esse.—qualis et quanta: physical superiority in size and beauty were according to the Greek and Roman inseparable from mental superiority in size and beauty: cp. Homeric ἥς τε μέγας τε.

592—reprensus—continuit: "she seized and held (me)."

593—roseo—ore: Aen. I, 402: rosea cervice.

594—dolor: "indignation."

595—quonam—recessit? "whither, pray, hath departed thy care for me."
—nostri: objective genitive after cura.—tibi: dative of reference.

596—non—aspicies: "wilt thou not go and see."—non=nonne.—prius before doing anything else.—ubi—liquoris: dependent question.

599—ni—ensis: "unless my guardianship were still withstanding them, already the flames would have swept them away and the sword of the enemy would have drained their blood." The ordinary form would be resisteret—tulissent. The present represents a continuous effort, and the perfect the completion of the act if the effort were relaxed.

603—a culmine: cp. κατ' ἀκρῆς, literally, "from the top to the bottom:" "completely."

604—quae—caligat: "which now veils your sight and dims your mental vision and lies damp and dark around you."—caligat: root SKAL, "to cover:" cp. squalor, κελαινός, κηλῖς. Note the emphatic position of tu, "do you not," no matter what others do.

608—avulsae saxis saxa: "and rocks rent from rocks."—saxis: ablative of separation.

609—undantem: "rolling in billows."

612—Scacas: from σκατός, "left" or "west," hence the gate looking westward to the sea, for the Greek augur when he divined looked north, and hence "west" or "left" were with him synonymous: cp. Hom.

Od. 3, 295 : σκαυὸν ῥίον, "the western headland" : others connect it with Siko, the name of a Trojan hero, or demigod, and see the remnant of the same word in Sigeum, Sichaeus, Scamander.

615—iam—insedit : "already, lo, Tritonian Pallas has perched on the top of the citadel."

616—limbo : "robe," or "border," referring to the πέπλος : another reading is nimbo, "a halo."—Gorgone : on the shield or aegis of Minerva was the head of the Gorgon Medusa.

622—inimica—numina : Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva.

624—considerare in ignes : "to sink down into the flames."

625—ex imo : cp. e culmine : v. 603.

626—ac—ruinam : "and even as when on the top of mountains, hacked by the steel and hard plied axes the woodmen with rivalry strive to cut down an aged oak : threateningly it ever hangs and trembling shakes its foliage with quivering top." The fall of a hero is often compared to the fall of a tree : cp. Hom. Il. 4, 482 : when the fall of Simoïsuis is compared to that of a poplar ; so also the fall of the boxer Entellus in Aen. 5, 448, is compared to that of a hollow pine tree :

ut quondam cava concidit aut Erymantho.
aut Ida in magna, radicibus eruta pinus.

So also Macaulay, Lay of Horatius :—

And the great Lord of Luna Fell at that deadly stroke,
As falls on Mount Alvernum
A thunder-smitten oak.

630—vulneribus—ruinam : "till gradually overpowered by blows it gave one final deep groan and torn from its ridge it falls in ruin."—congemuit—traxit : the perfects (corresponding to the gnomic aorist in Gk.) for a present, to express a frequent act. —iugis : ablative of separation.

632—deo=deae, i.e., Venus.

633—expedior=me expedio : "I extricate myself," "I find my way out."

- 634—peruentum, scil. est mihi=perveni: "I have reached": F. 164, 2; P. 96 (b).
- 637—excisa: it is more probable that excissa is the correct reading, as excindere urbem is common but not excidere urbem.
- 638—quibus sanguis: "whose blood is untouched by age."—scil. est.—aevi is either the genitive of respect: cp. maturus aevi, anxius aevi; or a genitive for the ablative of instrument or integer aevi=integri aevi: descriptive genitive after sanguis.
- 639—solidaeque vires: "whose strength stands firm in all its native vigour:" ablative of means.
- 641—Note the emphatic position of me and the emphatic repetition of mihi.—ducere vitam as vitam producere (v. 6, 637). Metaphor taken from spinning: cp. Milton's Lycidas:—

Comes the blind fury with the abhorred shears
And slits the thin-spun life.

- 642—satis—urbi: "enough and more than enough (it is) that I have seen one destruction and that we have survived the capture of the city." Vergil refers to the destruction of the city by Hercules in revenge for the perjury of Laomedon.—superare is used here for superesse. For capta urbs: "the capture of a city"; see note v. 413.
- 644—positum: cp. κεῖμενος, "laid out for burial."—adfati: "having saluted": referring to the utterance (conclamatio) of the words salve, vale, ave, as the friends departed from the body at the funeral pile: Aen. 6, 231, 506; II, 97.
- 645—manu: either "by my own hand," or, as Heyne says, "at the hand of the foe," or "by attacking the foe." The latter part of the line would seem to imply that the enemy would through compassion either put an end to his life, or accord him the rite of burial by casting three handfuls of earth upon his remains; see next note.
- 646—facilis—sepulcri: the usual interpretation of this passage is, "a trifling thing is the loss of a sepulchre," a most unnatural speech to put in the mouth of Anchises, unless it is meant as the language of reckless and bitter despair, for the loss of a sepulchre was looked upon as the greatest of all losses. Another interpretation, suggested by Horace, Od. I, 28, 35, is as follows: "The casting of a few handfuls of earth in token of burial is an easy thing (and one which the enemy surely will not hesitate to perform)". iactura, from iacio, although it usually means "a loss," may mean "the act of throwing." Sepulcri

would be an easy and natural metonymy ; and facilis, literally “doable,” would not be strained into “slight,” “trifling” or “easily sufferable.” Moreover, it is a question whether the tragic despair indicated in a willingness to forego burial and thus submit to eternal unrest simply to escape a few years of uncertainty and sorrow in this life, is not just a little too improbable to be artistic, and at any rate out of accord with Vergil’s fine appreciation of the niceties of things and his pathetic tendency to soften painful effects wherever possible. It all hinges on the meaning of ipsa manu, v. 645. Taking the most reasonable meaning of this, viz. : “by my own hand,” the sequence of thought would be : “I will slay myself, the enemy will pity me, strip my body of spoils and (in return) perform the easy task of burial,” cp. Horace’s

Iniecto ter pulvere curras.

648—annos demoror : either “long since have I delayed the years,” or “long have I lingered through the years.”—ex quo scil. tempore : “since.”

649—fluminis—igni : “blasted me with the breath of his thunderbolt and smote me with his lightning.” Anchises is said to have been so punished for boasting of the love of Venus.—fulminis ventis : perhaps Vergil refers to the theory of Epicurus that lightning was a fiery wind.

650—perstabat memorans : “he continued to speak” : cp. διετέλει λέγων.

651—effusi lacrimis scil. sumus : “were melted in tears.”

652—ne : dependent on the request implied in effusi sumus.

653—fatique—vellet : “and would be willing to add his weight to the doom that was pressing us down.”

654—hacret : an example of zeugma : “and he clings to his purpose and sticks to the same spot.” Often the preposition is omitted before the former and expressed with the latter of two nouns.

656—quod—dabatur : “what plan or what chance was any longer offered us?”—consilium : means of human safety.—fortuna : divine aid.

657—mene—ore : “did you expect, my father, that I could withdraw and abandon thee, and has so unnatural an expression fallen from a father’s lips?”—te relicto : ablative absolute.—posse—speravisti : the verb spero is often used in the sense of “expect,” not “hope,” and takes the present infinitive.—excidit : according to Servius,

660—et—animo: “and (if) this is thy firm resolve”:—animo: local ablative=in animo.—perituraeque—iuvat scil. te: “and if it is thy pleasure to add thyself and thine to the fate of Troy doomed to perish.”—note the force of periturae.

663—pātris, pātrēm: such variations are common when a mute is followed by a liquid: cp. tenēbris (Georg. 3, 551; 3, 401): pharētram, pharētram (Aen. 1, 336, 324); rētro, rētro (Aen. 11, 405; 5, 428); dūplex, dūplicem (Aen. 12, 198; 1, 655); so also Theocr. 6, 19; τὰ μὴ καλὰ καλὰ πέφανται: Ilom. Il. 5, 31; Ἄρες, Ἄρες Βροτόλουγε.—obtruncat=obtruncare consuevit.

664—hoc—cernam? “was it for this that you rescued me through the darts, through the fire, that I might see the enemy in my inmost chambers, and Ascanius and my father and Creusa by their side, one slaughtered in the blood of the other?”—quod mē eripis is the subject of the sentence and hoc=propter hoc.—note cernam after ut: the idea is “this was your object all along that I may now see,” or it may be a case of vivid sequence as in Greek.

669—sinite—revisam=sinite ut revisam: “permit me to seek again”: ut is often omitted with such verbs: fac venias, “see that you come”: licet abeas, “you may go.”—instaurata: used proleptically.=revisam et instaurem proelia: “allow me to seek again and renew.”

670—nunquam: here equivalent to an emphatic non: cp. Verg. Ecl. 3, 49: nunquam hodie effugies.

671—accingor: see note v. 227.

672—clipeoque—aptans: “and I was fitting my left hand into the clasps of the shield.” The imperfect may either express the difficulty he had in doing this or the reluctance with which he left the palace.—It is noteworthy that the strap or handle of the shield through which the left hand passed was called insertorium.

676—sin: "but if, on experience, you rest your hope on resorting to arms."—expertus: literally, "having tried arms," scil. arma.

680—dictu—mirabile: give the construction of the supine in -u: (F. 174; P. 105).

681—inter manus—ora: in the hands of his mother and being held up he was at once above the face of Creusa and that of Aeneas. Translate: "for while held in the hands and between the faces of his sorrowful parents."

682—ecce pasci: "lo! a light crest seemed to shed a lustre from the head of Iulus, and with harmless touch (it seemed) to lick his wavy locks and to play around his temples." Distinguish in meaning lēvis and lēvis,—visus scil. est.—apex is properly the point of the cap of a flamen, something like the spike of a modern helmet: here the 'tongue of fire.' It was originally wound round with wool: root ap, 'to tie,' 'to wind': cp. apto, aptus.—tactu: abl. of reference.—pasci: metaphor of cattle or sheep moving quietly while feeding on pasture land.

688—caelo=ad caelum: see note v. 36.

691—deinde: "do thou then grant us thine aid."—deinde marks a sequence of the condition si pietate incremur.—auxilium: This is the MSS. reading, but Probus, Peerlkamp, Keil, Ribbeck and others read augurium to harmonize with Aen. III, 89, where almost the identical expression "da pater augurium" is used. We have followed the MSS., but it may be a case where all the earliest extant MSS. have been tainted from the same source. Scan this line and tell what metrical figure in it.—firma: ratify: by a second omen.

693—intonuit lacrum: "it thundered on the left": cognate accusative. Thunder on the left was a good sign according to Roman augury: see note v. 54.

A meteor or shooting star was a phenomenon regarded with superstition among the ancients. Cp. Aen. 5, 523: so also Shakespeare, Julius Caesar, Act 2, Sc. 2:

When beggars die there are no comets seen:
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

So also Richard II., Act 2, Sc. 4:

The meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven:
The pale-faced moon looks bloody on the earth,
And lean-faced prophets whisper fearful things,
These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.

696—Idaea silva: indicating that Mt. Ida was the point for which they should set out. Servius says that the light signified the future glory of the house of Aeneas: the fiery trail, that some would stay behind; the length of the path, their long voyage: the furrow (sulcus), that it would be by sea: and the sulphur-smoke, the death of Aeneas, or the war in Italy.

697—signantemque vias: “and marking out its way” (in the heaven).—tum—lucem: “then in a long train its furrow sheds a gleam.”—tum: after its disappearance.

699—hic vero: for the more usual tum vero.—se—auras: Anchises was probably before this stretched on his bed: see v. 644.

702—domum: “family.”

703—augurium: probably meant at first as omens from the cry of birds: avis, root GAR, “to cry”: cp. γαρύειν, garrere, graculus.—Troia: all that is left of Troy, meaning Iulus, Anchises and Aeneas, or some say future Troy.

704—cedo: “I yield,” “I resist no more.”

706—propriusque—volvunt: Conington takes incendia subject and aestus object: “and now the fire rolls its burning tides nearer”: others take aestus subject and incendia object: “the conflagration rolls a fiery flood.”

707—imponere: passive used in a middle sense = te impone.

708—subibo humeris: “support you on my shoulders.”—labor iste: “the burden you cause.”

- 711—longe: Servius thinks that Vergil is leading up to the loss of Creusa.
- 712—quae dicam=mea verba. Note that dicam is future indicative.—animis advertite: literally turn to (regard) my words with your minds. It is rare to find such a construction with adverto: the usual construction is animum alicui rei advertere or animum ad aliquam rem advertere.
- 713—egressis scil. vobis: "there is to you having left the city": or "as you quit the city there is": cp. ἐστὶ σοι εἰσπλέοντι τὸν κόλπον ἄστυ: "as you sail into the harbor there is a city."
- 714—desertae: "lonely": temples to Ceres were usually in a solitary quarter outside the walls.

- 716—sedem: "trysting place."—ex diverso: "from different quarters."
- 718—Note the emphatic position of me: "As for me, it is a sin to handle them, having come away from so bloody a war and from recent carnage."
- 719—donec—abluero: running water was held indispensable for purification: cp. the teaching of the Twelve Apostles where baptism is ordered to be ἐν ὕδατι ζῶντι.
- 721—latos—leonis: "I spread over my broad shoulders and my neck stooped (to receive the burden), the tawny lion's hide as a covering."
—latos umeros: is the Homeric εἵρεας ὤμων: cp. Tennyson, The Passing of Arthur: "Make broad thy shoulders to receive my weight."—super: adverb.—insternor: a middle use of a passive.—veste—pelle: hendiadys.
- 724—implicuit: "clung tight."

- 726—dudum: "but now."
- 727—neque—Graia: "nor the Greeks massed in opposing ranks."—ex is used in a pregnant sense: the Greeks were not merely massed in opposing ranks, but were also hurling their darts from these ranks.
- 729—suspensum: "hesitating."
- 731—omnemque—viam: "and I thought that I had passed safely through all my journey."—creber—sonitus: "the thick trampling of feet."
- 732—Note the succession of dactyls well marks the agitation of the movement.

- 735—hic—mentem: “here it was that some unfriendly power confused and bereft me of my senses in my panic.”—nescio quod: literally, “I know not what”: a weak aliquod.—male amicum: see note on male fida: v. 23.
- 736—namque—viarum: “for while I speedily keep along the unfrequented places, and diverge from the familiar line of the road.”—avia scil. loca.—cursu: see note v. 175, pelago.—regione: ‘direction,’ the original meaning from rego, ‘I direct’: cp. Livy, 21, 31: recta regione iter instituit.
- 738—heu—incertum: “alas! to my sorrow my wife Creusa torn from me by fate either halted or strayed or sat down being weary, I cannot say.”—misero: ethical dative. The indicatives substitit—erravit—resedit for the subjunctives substiterit—erraverit—resederit of dependent question may be explained by supposing that Vergil intended the question to be originally a direct one: “did she stop, or did she wander away or did she sit down?” The minor alternative is introduced by sen.
- 741—nec—reflexi: “nor did I look back for my lost wife or turn my thoughts to her till I had come to the mound and holy abode of ancient Ceres.”—amissam scil. coniugem.—tumulum=ad tumulum.—antiquae: cp. desertae v. 713.
- 742—demum: used only with (1) pronouns as is idem or (2) adverbs: tum, ibi, sic, nunc, jam: “here at last,” “here and not before.”
- 743—una: “she was the only one missing.”
- 744—fefellit: “was missed by.” Note that fallo is transitive.

- 749—cingor: see note v. 227.
- 750—stat: “my purpose is fixed”: see note v. 660. Here stat=stat mihi sententia: cp. Aen. 12, 678: stat conferre manum Aeneae.

- 752—obscura limina: “the dark portals of the gate.”
- 753—qua—lustrō: “by which I had taken my departure and tracing back our footsteps I follow them through the darkness and scan them with my eyes.”
- 756—si forte: “if haply—if haply—she had returned home.” The repetition expresses the last ray of hope. With si, “to see whether”: cp. Greek ei.

758—ilicet: “forthwith.”

761—porticibus—asylum: local ablative. Perhaps Vergil is thinking of the shrine of Juno in the capitol of Rome.

765—auro solidi=auro solido: “of solid gold”: abl. of description.

770—ingeminans: “repeating”: the name Creusa.

771—tectis furenti: “rushing madly among the houses”: tectis: see note v. 528.

773—nota major: like the gods, the dead no longer “cribbed, cabined or confined” were larger than mortals: so Romulus when he appeared after death according to Ovid Fasti, 2, 503: pulcher et humano maior.

775—adfari—demere: historical infinitive.

778—asportare: “to take.”

779—fas: as well as regnator is subject of sinit.

781—terram=ad terram—Hesperiam: Italy was called Hesperia: (Greek, ἑσπερία, “the western land”: cp. ἑσπερος, Vesper, “evening”: root vas, “to dwell,” the dwelling place of the sun): Spain, ultima Hesperia—Lydius: the Etruscans were said to come from Lydia (Herod. 1, 94), and the Tiber flowing by Etruria is called Tuscanus Tiberis (Georg. 1, 499).

784—parta tibi, scil. est: “is already won for thee”: though not yet possessed. Prophecy describes the future as present.—Creusae: objective genitive: “for thy loved Creusa.”

785—non ego: note the emphatic position: so also Hector had this fear for Andromache: Il. 6, 454, ὅτε κέν τις Ἀχαιῶν χαλκοχιτώνων Δακρυόεσσαν ἄγηται.

788—deum genetrix: “mother of the gods”: Cybele, a Phrygian goddess, specially worshipped on Mt. Ida, and also a patroness of Troy.

792—ter—somno: These lines are translated from Od. II, 204, where Ulysses says of the shade of his mother:—

τρίς μὲν ἐφωρμήθην, ἔλκειν τέ με θυμὸς ἀνωγει, τρίς δέ μοι ἐκ χειρῶν σκιῇ εἵκελον ἦ καὶ ὀνειρῶ ἔπτατο.

Thrice she flitted from my hands as a shadow or even as a dream.”

So also Wordsworth's Laodamia:—

Forth sprang the impassioned Queen her Lord to clasp;
Again that consummation she essayed:
But unsubstantial Form eludes her grasp
As often as that eager grasp was made.

794—somno: a vision seen in sleep, rather than sleep itself.

799—animis—parati scil. ire or sequi: “ready with heart and wealth to go.”
